Strictly for Learning

It looked incredibly large and looming, its many buildings giving the impression of an unsolvable maze. The ten o'clock sunlight bathed the entrance of the school as the sophomores-to-be gathered in the auditorium for the annual orientation. A mixture of excitement and suspense swept over the crowd as principal Ernest Frank addressed the students. His welcoming speech set a more comfortable ambience, and everyone began to feel more at ease. As the orientation progressed, sophomores were introduced to such staff members as Vice Principals Howard Stofer and O.J. Cole who clarified school rules and policies, Counselors Jean Stewart, Carrie Palmer, John Seal, Bill Henry, who in turn, spoke of their duties as staff members, and Head Counselor George Blair, whose efforts toward the students cannot be recompensated.

After the orientation came to a close, the pre-sophomore class exited with overwhelming thoughts. Approaching the school from the south-end were a returning group of pre-seniors; some of them athletes, others being A.S.B. officers.

As the noticeable elite entourage passed by, the post-junior high graduates looked in envy. From that point on the premeditated struggle for a prominent status began. In the mind of each student held a unique idea in which to attain the honor of the "Touch of Class."

▲ GAZING intently, students and parents alike concentrate on the speaker.

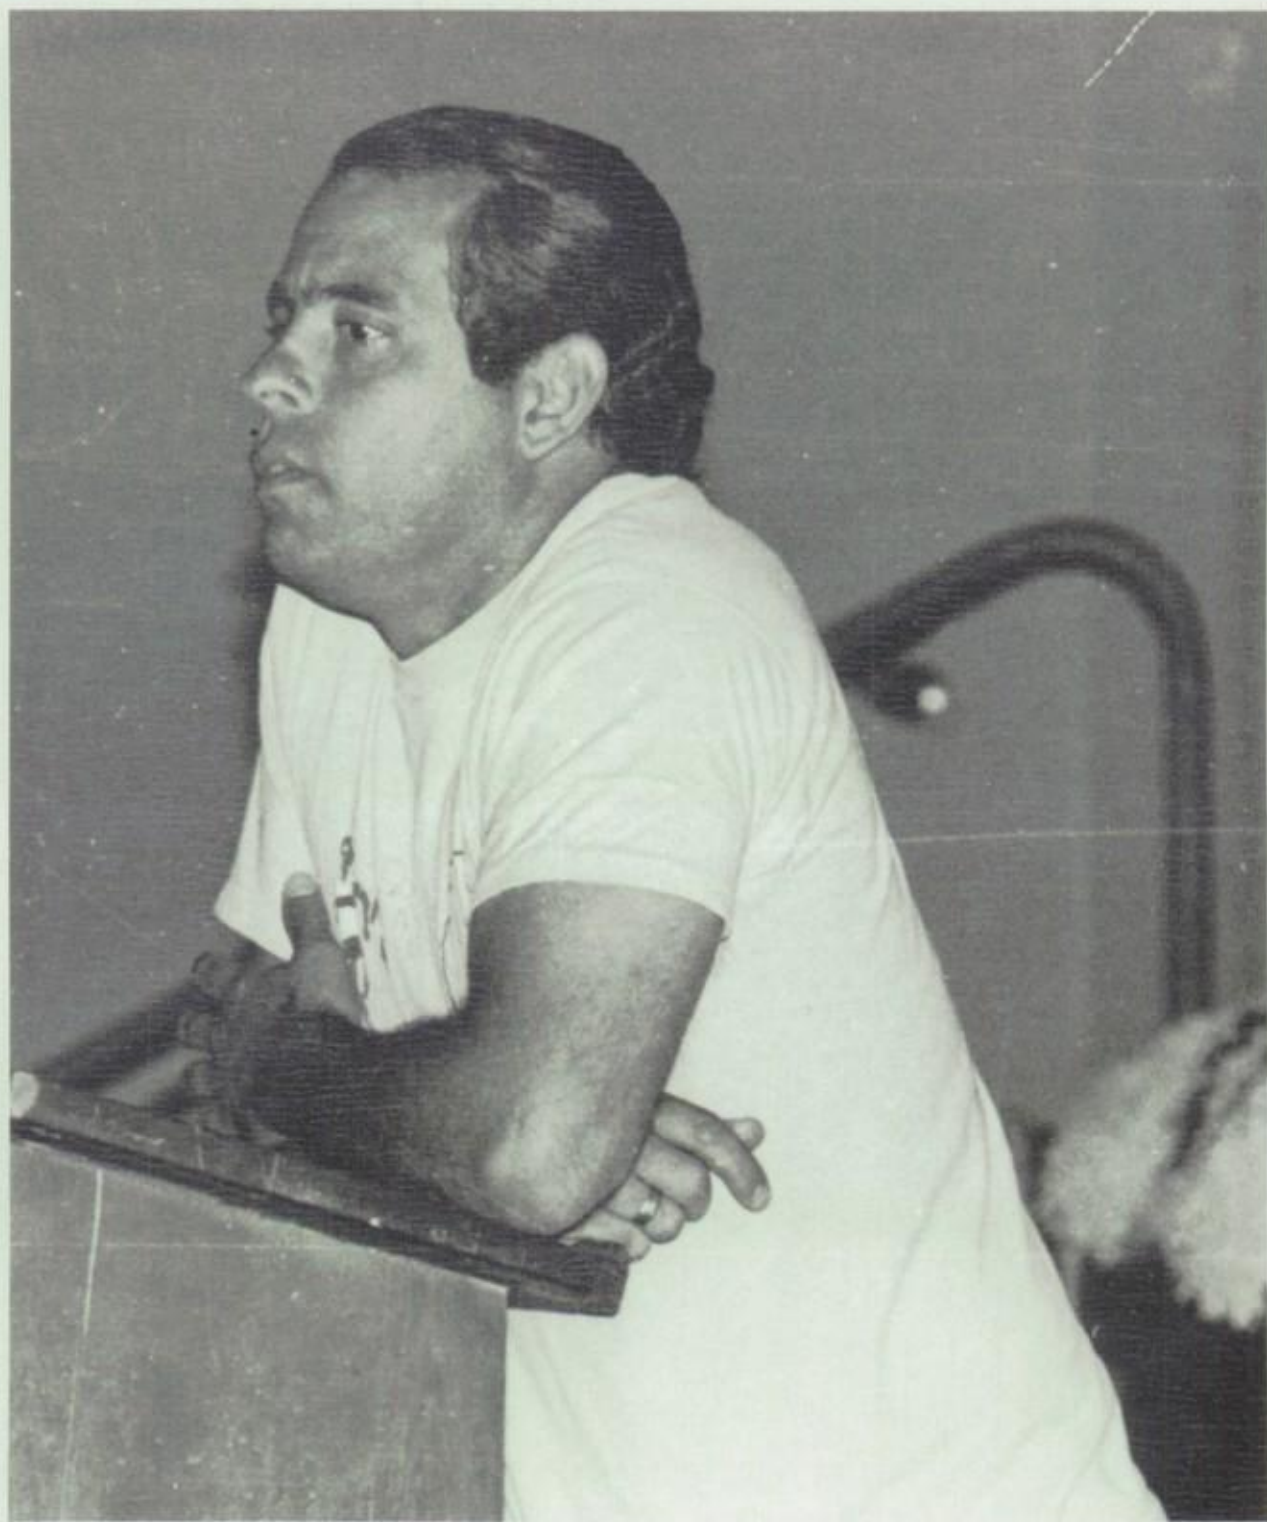

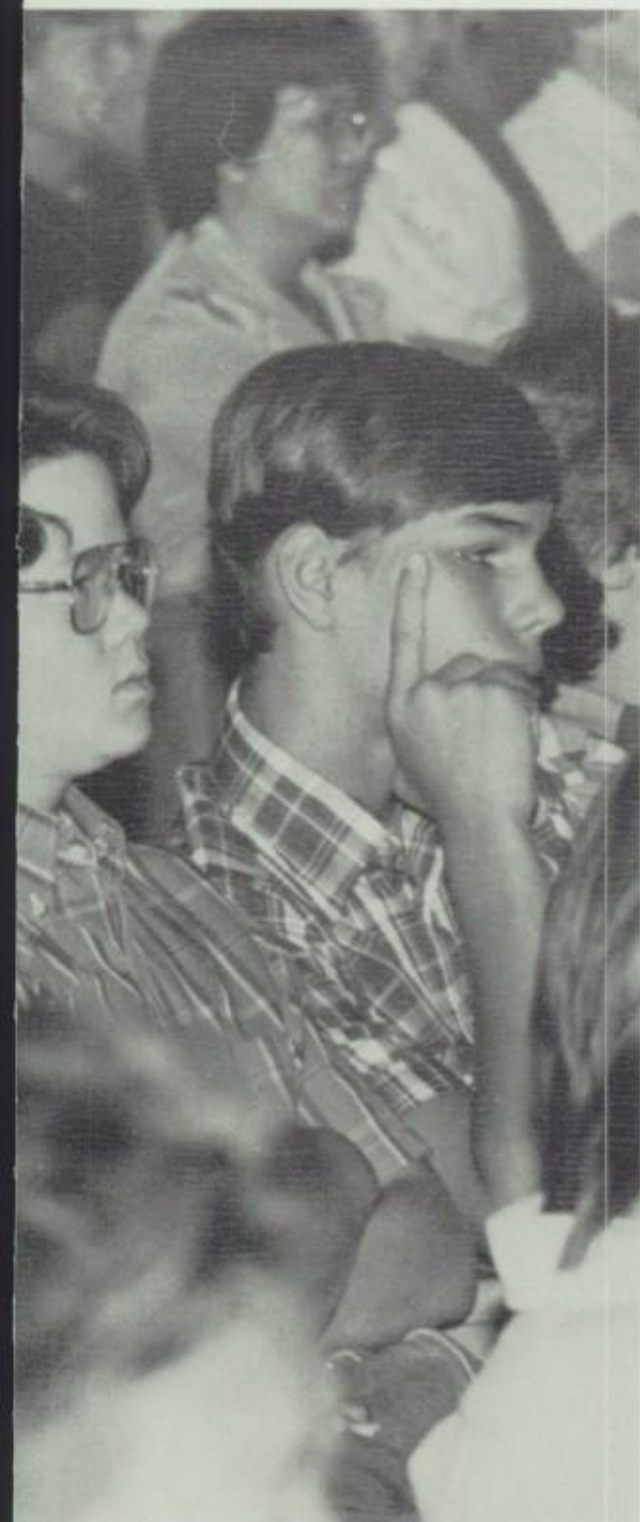

► WITH his mind on the new school year, Brandon Tintiangco walks pensively from the auditorium.

It was a great form of social interaction and was really informative.

Points Of Interest

Butterflies filled sophomore stomachs as they woke to a long-awaited school morning. What would their high school years be like? Two weeks earlier, juniors were getting ready to select their desired classes, and with much enthusiasm, gathered in the cafeteria. The early morning sun peered through the curtains of anticipating seniors who would finally predominate as the "big guys" on campus. Yes, school had finally begun its traditional course, and memories would again be made by the hands of fate for they work wonders when employed with the materials of so many personalities.

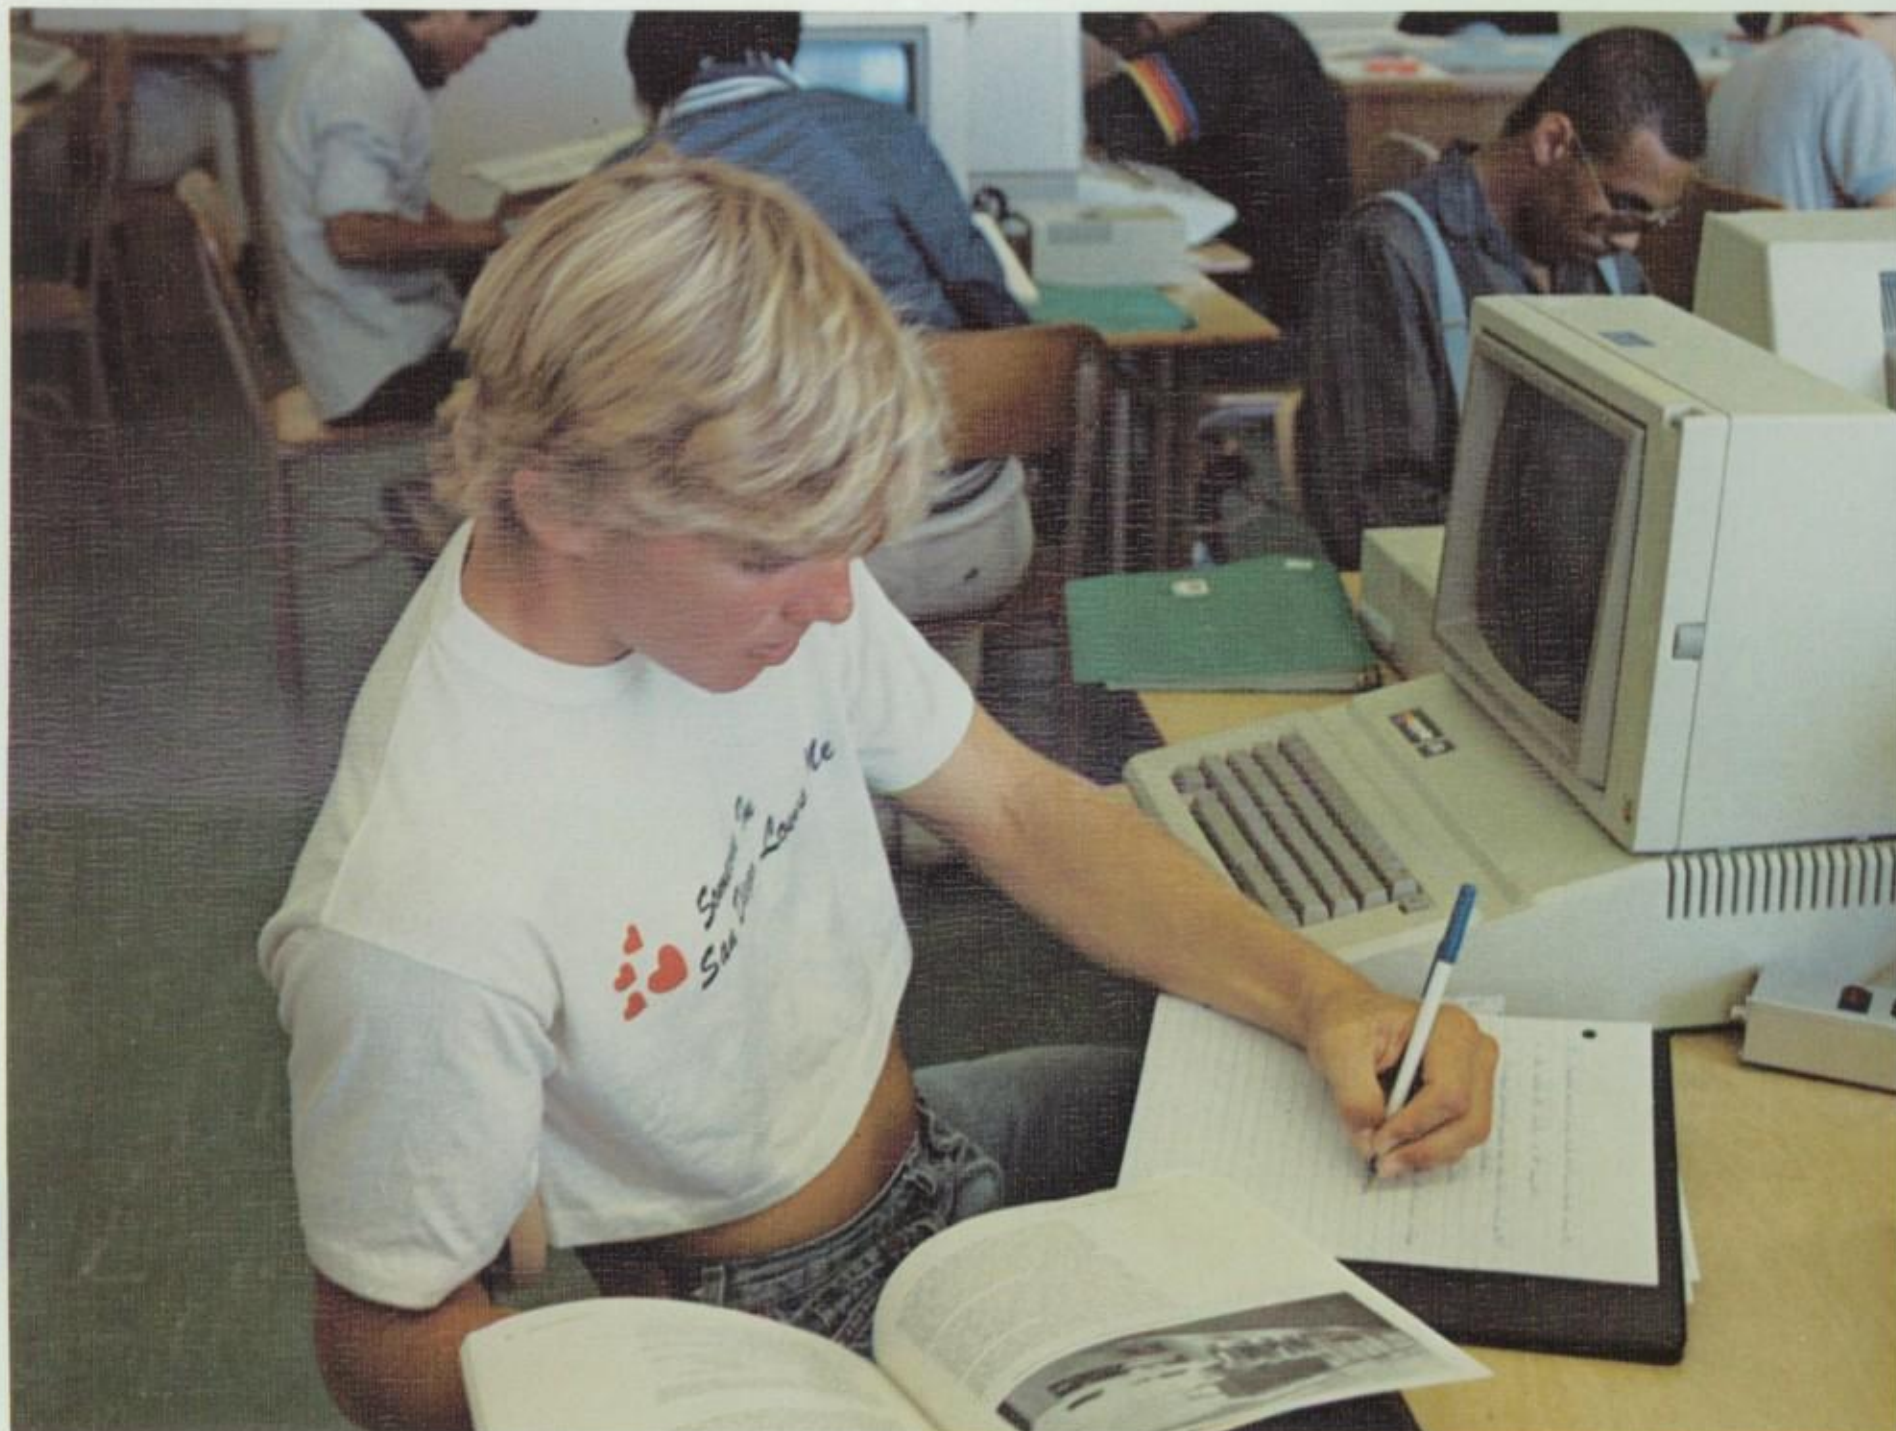

During the first week of school, students had their taste of a high school pep-rally and one of the most favored and popular high school sports was in season . . . football was back, and fans were not unfaithful. With groups such as this, the spirit was enhanced, and as Sophomore Paul Hicks stated, "Because of the available organizations, students are more enthusiastic, and school spirit is heightened."

These first few weeks indicated a promising start to a year that would hold much spirit for our school, and a dignity that carried our heads that much higher. It was the contributions that were made by students that truly merited us as a school with that extra something . . . A Touch of Class.

Life in the Fast Lane

*F*aces rush by, voices are barely audible. The locker hall — a brilliant red streak that dangles in the morning air. Barely enough time to get to class, it's going too fast . . . too fast. Gleaming faces with smiles rush by with the wind, laughter humming, the buildings silently singing; oh the song of another school morning. The worries of yesterday are confronted today, but everything falls into place. The heart beat is rapid; life is hardly sane . . . What else can one expect? A student's life is lived in the fast lane.

A Matter of Style

After romantic dinners at elegant restaurants, couples were destined for Vacation Village Resort to venture to a place called "Heaven."

Excitement was in the air as everyone was seen in their most luxurious and lavishing attire. Silk and satin, leather and lace, ties and tuxedos were seen on the dance floor, strutting their stuff to the stylish new sounds of DJ, Classé.

A magical feeling arose as the Homecoming Court was announced. King Marc Bonner and Queen Mouk Thammavongsa were then called upon to complete the festivities and to honor us by dancing the first slow-dance.

An atmosphere of Heaven was desired, and with a matter of style, an atmosphere of Heaven was certainly achieved.

Spirit Lives On

You find yourself surrounded by shrieking teenagers wearing brightly colored sun-glasses, broad rimmed hats, and with nose kote smeared across their maliciously grinning faces. The sound of slippers scuffing across the hallway echoes loudly . . . your heart suddenly skips a beat when Marc Bonner dashes past you in a pink nightgown! You watch bewilderedly as hundreds of helpless souls, with the misconception that they are in Ancient Greece, scurry by in their bedsheets, and all the while you are dodging savage teddy bears being waved in your face. You become rather frightened — has the school gone mad??? Have your worst nightmares come true??? YES!!

It was Spirit Week, the week preceeding Homecoming of 1985, and all self-respect was lost as the wild students compiled their energies in preparation for one of the liveliest weekends of the year. The best was yet to come — an extended lunch on Friday served time for an exciting pep rally. Student participation and enthusiasm was at an all time high; everyone wanted to see the Komets "Singe The Centaurians." 6:00 p.m., Friday night, October 18th: The drum roll began — the band marched proudly into the stands. Everything was a blur of maroon and white and the music resonated, intermingling with the restless and excited cries of the raving crowd. The turnout was incredible, not only by current students but by devoted Alumni players, old and young, eager to cheer their descendant team onto victory, along with the 40 some Alumni Cheerleaders. The crowd became attentive for the kickoff, and then the screams ripped through the Stadium for the first two quarters of the game.

Halftime entertainment . . . the floats rounded the bend — decked with maroon, silver, and white balloons and a cheerful mob of Juniors. The float, "Heaven in '87," quickly took first prize. After they had set free their huge "K" to dominate the sky, "Cloud 9," floated by in their trail with the Seniors and took second place prize for their picturesque interpretation of a heavenly paradise. Tension mounted until the Court was finally announced and the crowns were placed carefully on the heads of the happy winners. Everyone could then resume watching the game as well as begin dreaming about Saturday night, and deciding what shoes to wear that would be most comfortable to dance in the whole night through.

Sincere effort and fellow support was more than evident in the teams Homecoming challenge against University City High. Even though we didn't win, it was a victory for Kearny on the parts of all those involved in any way. The team played with great dedication and enthusiasm and will long be recognized as one of Kearny's outstanding teams.

Homecoming is over now, and is but a time to be remembered — yet another fond high school memory eternally implanted in your mind. You will sort through them someday and recall those ridiculous looking maniacs running through the hall in their beach and bedtime garb, and think proudly . . . you were then . . . you were there . . . YOU WERE ONE OF THEM!!!

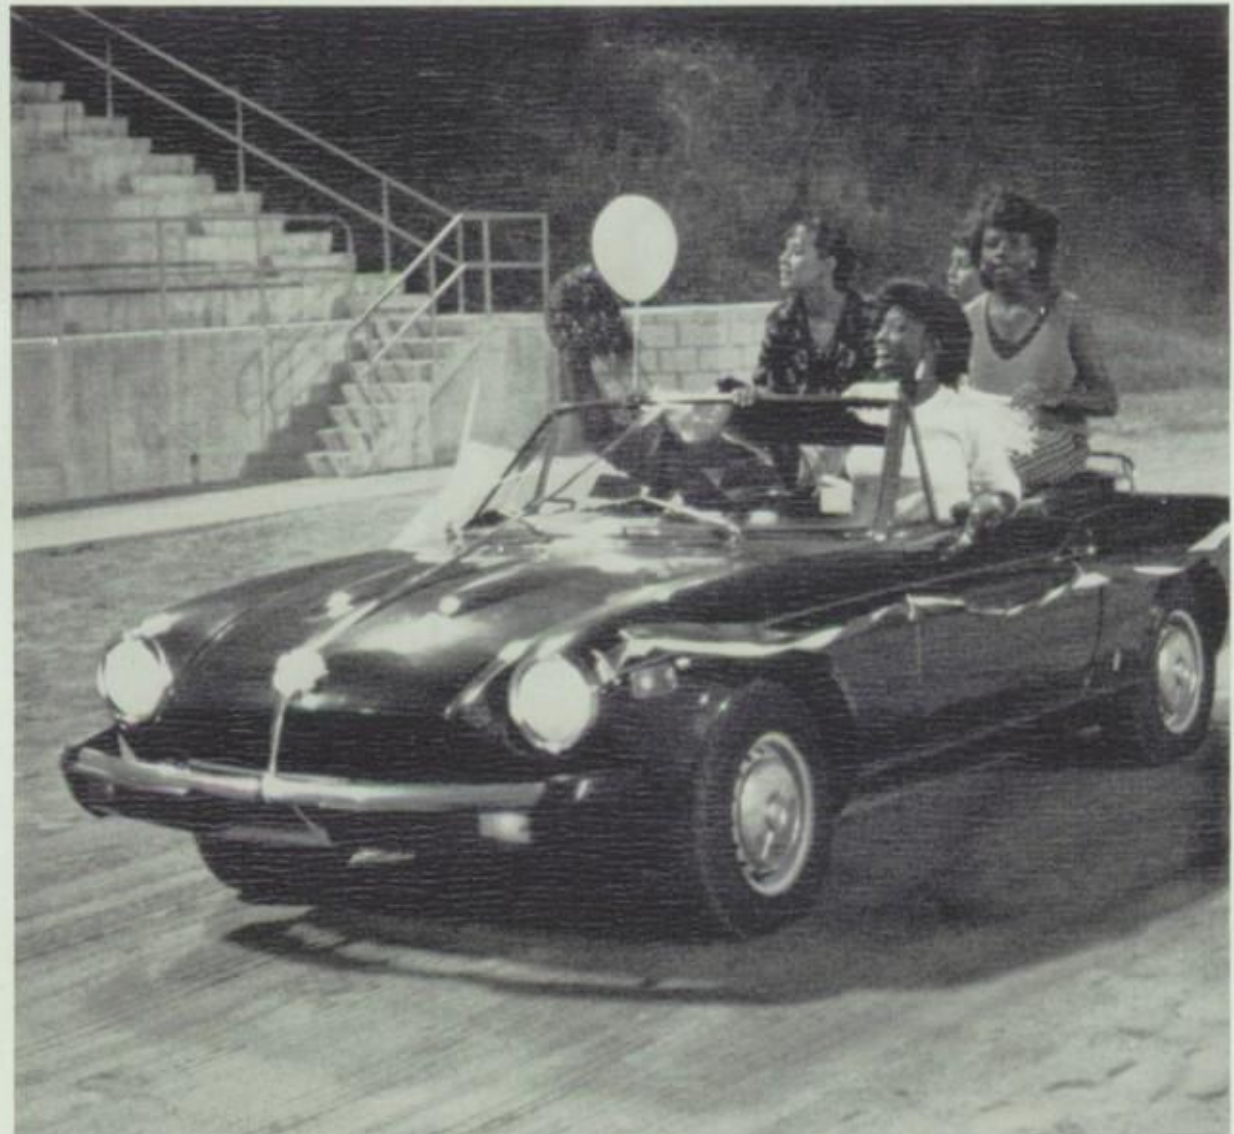

▼ ECSTATIC at their annual reunion, these Alumni cheerleaders show that spirit lives on.

▼▼ DISPLAYING their pride, Mr. & Mrs. School Spirit, Allison Lee, and Chuckie Feariby, wave to the crowd intensely.

▼ BUMMING around school, Annalisa Vonklipstein is lively and spirited on Beach Bum day during Spirit Week.

▼ OVERWHELMED with joy, Larura Bombardo, Beth Pilgrim, and Phandeth Sayasane are intent with their second place float.

▼ WITH a jovial display of laughter, Kevin Delaney does not fail in his attempt to arouse the crowd.

▲ ORIGINALITY is important, and Swatch Watches combined flashy colors, new wave designs, and the necessity of time, and have created a winner.

► EXPANDING into the clothing scene, Coca-Cola pants and sweatshirts were seen in classrooms regularly.

▼ DISTINGUISHED patterns were all over campus, one of which, paisley, was found in many colors and various shapes.

▼ EXPRESSING himself, Marc Bonner wears fashionable clothes to exhibit his exuberant personality.

▼ CAPTURING a unique hairstyle was tough to do, but Erin Dugan did, and with this was recognized throughout the year.

► DISPLAYING their originality, this group models their unusual hairstyles.

Here Today... Gone Tomorrow

There they are. Two of the many students who dare to wear exactly what they want. Impatiently fighting her way down the hallway, we see a female fashion example of 1986. Her black high-heel pumps, white lace stockings, long black skirt, and her bracelets to the elbow, are acknowledging to others that she knows what's "in." Gazing omniously through the crowd, she finds her escort leaning against the lockers. Be it the manly scent of his Polo cologne, the flare of his wild-patterned, knee-length shorts, his head-turning tank top, or the mystery of what's behind his Rayban Shades, it's obvious that he's going to be noticed. Fashion is something that's important in every person's life. Everyone is prone to express their own uniqueness and individuality, and what better way but through fads and fashions.

▼ LOOKING for a friend, Marva Davis and Monica Ingraham gaze curiously down the front hall.

► KICKING back, Marc Bonner and Lupe Ford are caught off guard.

▼ DISCUSSING their social lives and other happenings, Diana Gleason and Erica Rickard do so while eating lunch.

▼ WAITING for the bell to ring, Shelly Ford hurries to finish her drink so she won't be late to her next class.

► EATING lunch with a friend or as a couple was a frequent sight on campus, here Adrianna Alvarez and Jim Rydelski spend time together enjoying each others company.

► HANGING around school was another thing that a lot of students did, Vicki Groel and Pam Fagan smile for the camera during their lunch break.

Eat Much??

The atmosphere in the classroom becomes intense . . . the students have long since lost their interest. The rumbling of empty stomachs echoes loudly off the walls and all eyes are fixed on the clock as it ticks slowly away. It's 12:03. The students take their marks — BRRRING!!! The classroom is left souless as everyone rushes for the greatest social hour of the day. As books are thrown haphazardly into lockers, quick decisions are made as to where to head to replenish their energy supplies.

Cars dart out of the parking lot, destined for McDonalds and Taco Bell, while narrowly missing those scrambling across the street to establish their place in line at Carmen's, Square Pan, Rose's Donuts, and The Yogurt Cup. They ravenously stuff their faces as though there is no tomorrow and, at this point, there never is.

MAGIC ON THE SILVERSCREEN

Mysterious, magical, and exciting. Three words that are perfect descriptions of the entertainment world during 1985 and 1986!

Adventure, comedy, horror, love, science fiction, it didn't matter. Anyone would become anxious just thinking about being scared half out of their wits, laughing themselves out of their seat, or crying themselves through a box of Kleenex, while enjoying a big bucket of buttery popcorn. Maybe that explains the biggest year yet at the box office.

Comedy and adventure seemed to win out on the television. With the new fall season came new shows. The Cosby Show and Miami Vice were at the top of the list throughout the year, with the infamous Dynasty following closely, and the re-runs of Leave It To Beaver rounding it up.

The year was definitely one to remember, Full of tears and laughs, gasps and sighs, and lots and lots of popcorn!!!

EVENTS, FACES, & FOREIGN PLACES

A year to talk about, that was for sure. Tragedies, holidays, and concerts filled our conversations throughout the entire year.

During the course of the year, many events happened. The music world joined forces and started a world-wide effort to aid needy countries. Singles were released to donate money to be sent to these countries, the concert "LIVE AID," was held and raised over 7 million dollars.

In January of 1986, the space shuttle Challenger exploded on national television. This was a very shocking event and put a damper on everyone's spirits.

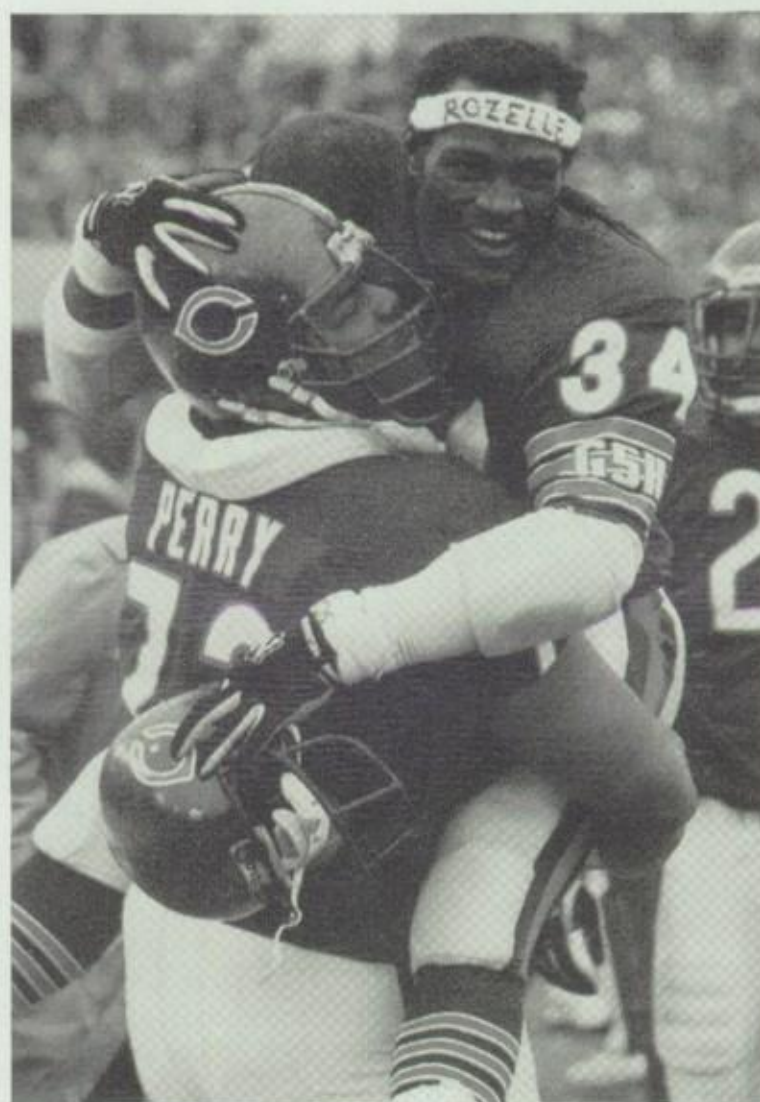

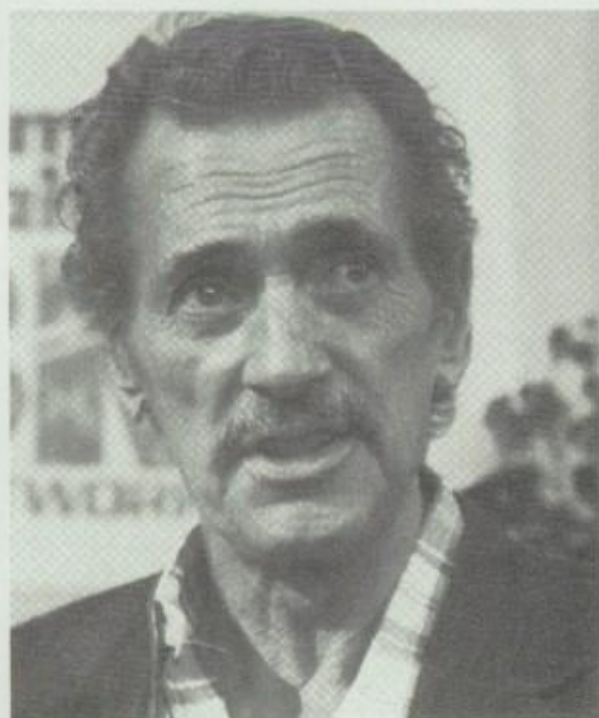

Also, in January, a new national holiday was declared, Martin Luther King Day was officially put on the calendar as a holiday.

The Soviets and Americans came to an understanding about nuclear arms. In Geneva, Korbachev and Reagan discussed our countries well-being and our beginning a relationship.

The year in all was on to speak of. Good-bye 1985.

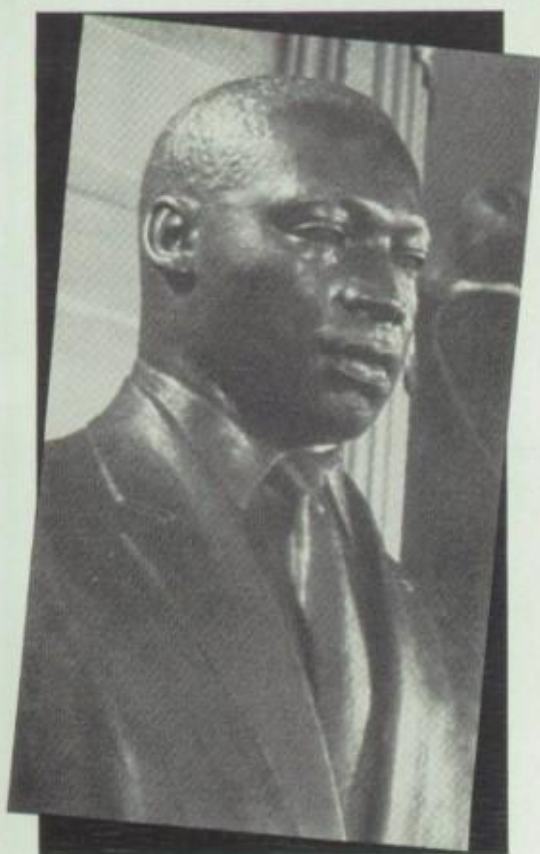

► IN A tragic airplane crash, 'teen-idol,' Ricky Nelson was killed. The crash occurred on New Year's Eve.

▼ SURPRISING news was that of Rock Hudson's death. Yet through his death, the nation realized the seriousness of AIDS.

as the BEAT goes on...

Music, music, music!!! It seemed that everybody's life had some kind of music in it.

Rock, heavy metal, soul, new wave, punk, pop . . . there were so many different tastes in music. But that didn't matter. Music was a release for problems, and a way to relax.

New groups were popping up all over the place. A-ha, Mr. Mister, Five Star, OMD, and Atlantic Starr were just a few. The songs took on a competition that was unbelievable. Videos and MTV took a big part in this game. Every group had to have a video released with his new single or it wouldn't be heard!!

All in all, the world of music can't be described in words. It has become advanced with technology, and the content . . . better with years. Let's hope there is more in the future as good as 1985-86.

P.B. & JAMM!

When students heard the 12:04 pm bell ring, lunch wasn't the only thing on their minds. Many of them were involved in the madness of our noontime attractions.

Pep rallies were an inspiration for all athletes. It gave students a chance to show their enthusiasm and support for all sports to succeed, yet the outrageous games and contests created an enjoyable atmosphere for everyone.

The disc jockeys were another story. Everyone was more than willing to jamm their lunch hour away. Students jumped at the chance to strut their stuff to the dance sounds of today.

When the sound of the 12:40 bell was heard, everyone rushed to their next class, with the remembrance of the past hour easing them through the next.

Get A New Face!

When the Cowardly Lion or the Wicked Witch of The West walks in to teach your class, or while eating lunch you watch Dracula or a transvestite walk by, you know something's gotta be up. So, unless for some strange reason you're hallucinating, it must be Halloween.

As usual, Halloween is always a day with lots of fun and games. At lunch, the costume contest was held. The competition was stiff, but the victory went to "V" — alias Angus Young.

Halloween's always a day filled with "tricks and treats." Participation was at an all-time high from both students and faculty. Costumes ranged from cats to Elvira. Why is Halloween always so well responded to?? Probably because everyone is filled with SPIR-IT!!!

▲ SHOWING their creativity, Dana Signs, Kevin Delaney, and Liz Kimbler display their cunning yet vampirish charm.

▲ POSING with pride and true variation, Debbie Shands, Melinda Santos, Tracey Jenkins, and Heather Moses flash a golden smile.

Under The Tree

Bells were jingled, candy canes were eaten, mistletoe was hung, and santa caps were seen all over campus.

As the holidays approached us, students became more anxious and full of suspense. With a two week vacation coming up, it seemed everyone on campus was developing a case of the jitters. With excitement building up, greetings were given, gifts were exchanged, and pictures were taken. The true meaning of Christmas was bringing everyone together.

Just walking around, anyone could have seen and felt the complete holiday spirit and joy.

◀ ANXIOUSLY opening a gift, Rosie Putnam begins to rip the paper.

In The MOONLIGHT

Cupid was definitely going "arrow-happy," because there wasn't a day you could come on campus without seeing a couple walking hand in hand.

There were the gentlemen escorting their ladies to every class throughout the day. Racking up the tardies, but enjoying every minute of it. Then there were the young ladies that couldn't stop thinking of when they'd see their sweethearts again. Being scolded for daydreaming in class, but not minding because they were in love.

Caring, committing, dedicating, and sharing are only few of the many things it takes to build a relationship.

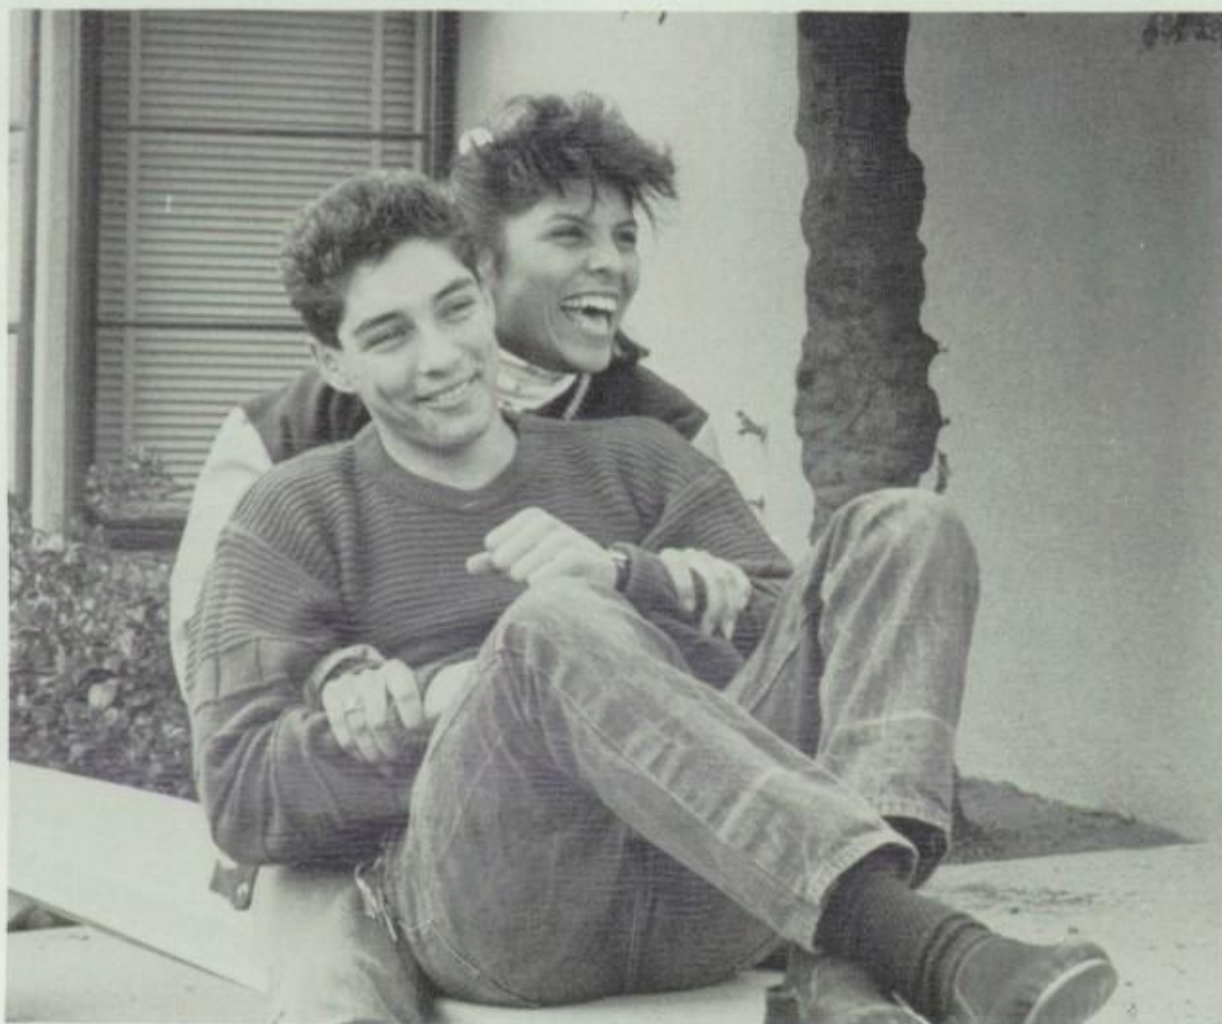

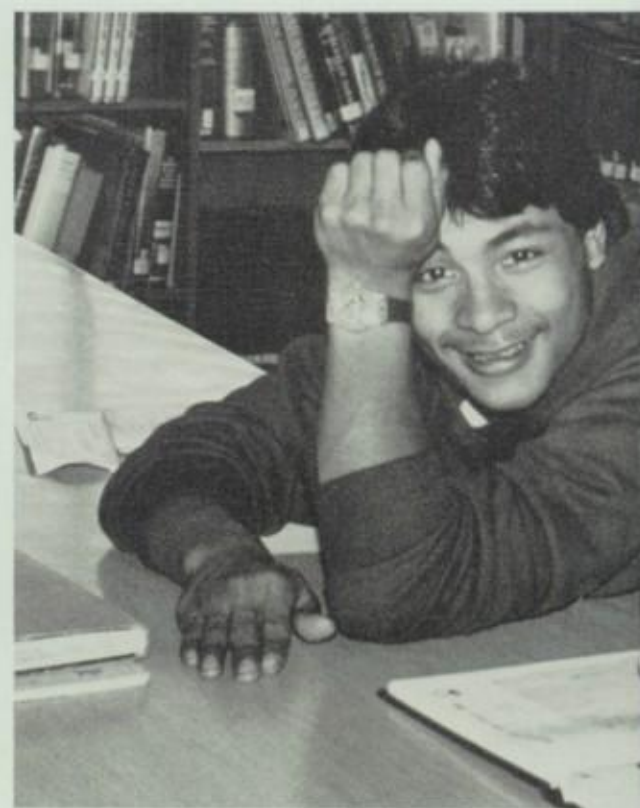

▼ LAUGHING uncontrollably, Carlos Estrada and Liz Pimental show that there's never a dull moment between them.

▼ SHARING in a major bear hug, Tami Herndon and Tom Swank show their mutual admiration for each other.

All In A Day's Work

PROBLEM: Need Cash

— QUICK!!!

SOLUTION: Get a JOB!!!

You may have found yourself ringing up some merchandise, pumping gas, frying fries, or even sweeping floors. But it was all in a day's work, because when Friday came along — so did the PAY-CHECK!

There were many reasons that students had to obtain jobs. To save up for college tuitions, to pay for a car, or just to have some extra spending money. But all in all, most teenagers gained the same things from employment. A chance to become more independent, to be out in the "working-world," and to gain more knowledge and experience for better job opportunities in the future.

Foot loose

Stratus — After Dark — and the Distillery were popular places that students were seen dancing. Another place was Kearny's gym.

Our Homecoming Dance was the opening dance of the year. It enabled students to see one another at their best, and have a great night socializing at the Vacation Village Resort.

Throughout the year, participation and spirit were at an all-time high. Electricity and excitement were felt in the air as people walked through the doors. The ASB planned many successful dances ranging from the Mad Hatter's to Sadie Hawkins. Tastes in music used to be a problem, but students enthusiasm and desire to have a good time helped to overcome that problem.

SEVEN HEROES

It was a beautiful Florida morning, the space shuttle Challenger was ready and waiting for launching time. What went wrong? That was the question many were asking on that morning. Thirty-five seconds into the long-awaited flight, everything was going on schedule. Yet, moments later, the aircraft burst into a fireball explosion. It was a detrimental and shocking event.

When the Challenger exploded, it took with it, seven astronauts ... seven heroes. Those seven who flew for us were of all sexes, races, and aspirations, but they all embodied the ideas and hopes of our country.

This flight was unique. For the first time, an ordinary civilian was selected to accompany the crew on the flight. Her name, Christa McAuliffe. She only wanted everyone to learn more, "What are we doing here? We're reaching for the stars."

All the astronauts were diversely gifted. The Challenger crew included Francis Scobee, 47; Judith Resnik, 37; Christa McAuliffe, 38; Ronald McNair, 36; Michael Smith, 41; Ellison Onizuka, 40; and Gregory Jarvis, 42.

Tuesday, January 28th, 1986, will be remembered for a long, long time. The Challenger's mission signified the American ambition to cross new horizons, it simply vanished into thin air. God Bless those special seven

A Novel Idea

All eyes are cast down upon a book. They look not at mere words, they see the true meaning the author intended the world to grasp. Many of our students have the opportunity to read some of the classics of time in their English classes. These classics that have survived hundreds of years have helped us to gain a better understanding of culture and people of the world. Even though many of the classic novels are quite old; they are still as pertinent as ever in dealing with public affairs. The era and society may be extremely different, but the people are virtually the same. They have dreams and hopes just as the people of today do. These novels help us realize what the individuals of yesteryear were striving so hard to obtain.

One such teacher that truly believes that every individual has the potential to appreciate literature in some aspect is Mrs. Phillips. Dealing predominantly with tenth graders, she instills a firm base into her students. Although tenth grade English isn't solely literature, Mrs. Phillips' introduction makes her students able to achieve a higher capacity of learning for their literary classes to come. With English in the hands of such teachers, it is almost inevitable to escape high school without the knowledge that English seems to enhance in an individual.

◀ 1. EARNESTLY working with a student, Mrs. Phillips lends a helping hand.

◀ 2. GIVING a furtive glance, Mr. Krause talks about everyone's favorite section, word problems.

Weird Science

Have you ever wondered how a frog felt swimming in a bucket of formaldehyde? Probably not, but if you ever walked into a biology class, you would know what it smells like.

Every year, the faces of the students change, but the requirements and student's reactions don't. As if on cue, all students said, "You mean we have to cut up this cute adorable frog?!!" After the dissections are over, the class settles down to a more "normal" atmosphere. Students were eager to learn about genetics and how they are used in the professional science fields. Classes were also amazed by chromosomes. One big challenge was putting cut-out chromosomes onto a piece of paper, in order.

Chemistry students were eager to play mad scientists, but soon learned there was more work involved than just mixing chemicals. Deciding which charges go where, and how many atoms there were, gave many aspiring young chemists unnecessary headaches.

At the end of the year, good, diligent scientists were rewarded with their passing grades and their unlimited knowledge of weird science.

Graphically Speaking

Ahhh! The fresh odor of industrial ink, a dimension of images that spring from their frames; colors that wrap one in a blanket of imagination. A world of wonder? Well, graphically speaking, yes. It's the Graphic Arts Class! One of the popular courses in school, Graphic Arts is available to any student who wants to obtain skills in using specialized equipment and enhancing one's creativity. Students choose a specialized section to focus upon. Choices are Photography, Silk screening, and Lithography. Photography deals with taking pictures and developing them. Students master the art of capturing motion on film. Silk screening is transferring art work on a stencil then to a screen. Here, one perfects the technique of using the copy camera, learning coordination and utilizing stencils for graphic purposes. Lithography is similar to Silk screening, but requires the use of machines. One learns to operate the offset press, and the process of developing layouts. With classes such as these available to students, opportunity is abundant, for the Graphic Arts Course can be of invaluable use in the future.

History—Close up

If someone had called you a tortfeasor, you probably would have been insulted. If you had been in Dr. Short's American Government class, you would have known that a tortfeasor is a person who has committed a tort, or a wrong against another person. Students also learned about the different branches of the Government, and how each of them works. The students were able to put their knowledge to work in a mock trial. Students acted as lawyers, witnesses, and jury members.

In the advanced United States History class, students worked diligently to finish their college text by April. With Mrs. Guentner as their teacher, the students were given numerous lectures and quizzes to prepare them for the Advanced Placement Exam.

Mrs. Guentner was also involved in Closeup, a non-profit organization, which gives students a chance to spend a week in Washington, D.C. and learn about our nation's capitol.

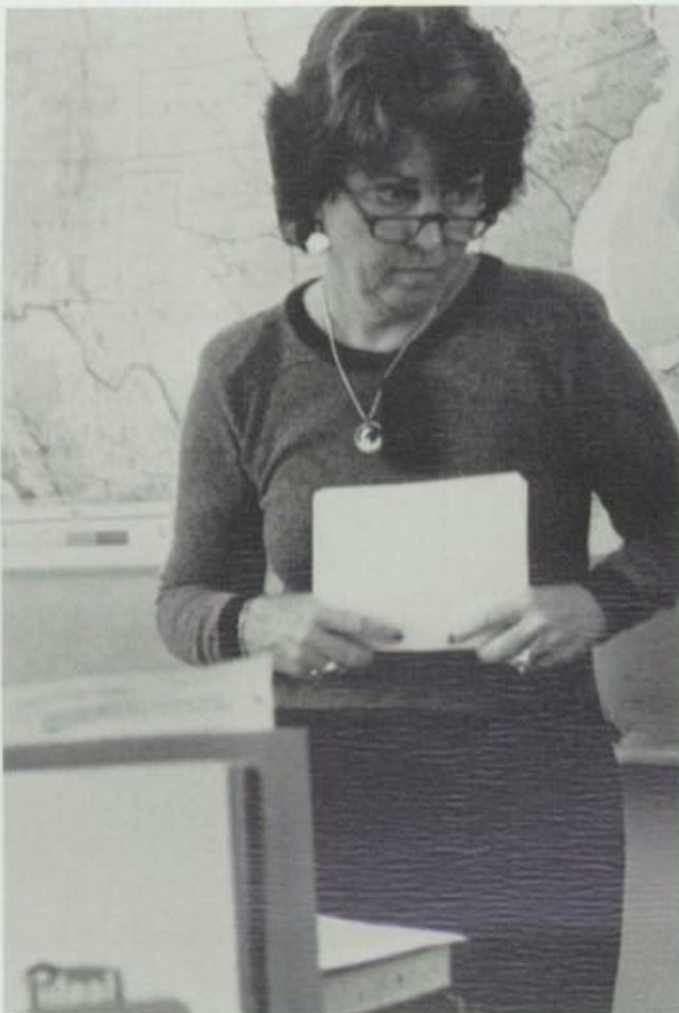

▼ 1. PAUSING in her lecture, Mrs. Guentner listens to a student's question.

▼ 2. ALWAYS ready to help, Mr. Franklin answers a question concerning an exercise in human relations.

▶ 4. PERFORMING his duties as Principal, Mr. Frank returns his messages.

▶ 5. LOCATED in the counseling office, Mrs. Gunning works on a student's transcripts.

A Dash of this, a sprinkle of that

From outside of the door, one could hear the humming of typewriters, the scribbling of pencils and pens scratching busily on paper; the soft laughter of a cheery office atmosphere. And who are the occupants who make up such a description? They are the muscle that strives to strengthen the school system; the hard working secretaries. Their great effort in combining their clerical skills and abilities have heightened school organization to an extreme, and yet the recognition they receive never seems to be enough for the immense contributors that they have come to be.

One secretary that aids the school enormously is Mrs. Cummings, the financial secretary. She has a very important job of paying all the bills, taking orders for the student body, paying the officials for the sporting events, arranging for transportation, doing the accounting for the student body and probably her most time consuming job is making change. Mrs. Cummings enjoys her job extremely because she gets to deal with the public and she gets much positive input from the students, do in part to her sunny personality. The office staff is a closely knit bunch and most efficient at their jobs.

Under Pressure

When a student had problems with a class or vice versa, there was only one place to go . . . the counseling office.

In the counseling office, students were greeted with smiling faces and helpful information. The counselors were swamped the first week of school with numerous class changes and new students.

The Career Center was also a valuable information center. Seniors signed up to hear various colleges during the week and to receive help in filling out their college applications by the deadlines. There was also a job board that assisted many students in obtaining their first job. The Career Center also provided financial aid workshops during December to help qualify students with a financial need to apply to the colleges they wanted.

Both places provided guidance and assistance in many areas. The counselors were always willing to help despite the pressure they were under throughout the year.

Math at its Best

What is the systematic treatment of magnitude relationships between figures and forms, and relations between quantities expressed symbolically? You guessed it! It's Arithmetics! One of the most important courses at school, math has become infamous for the meticulous work that goes into solving equations and mathematical problems. Although many of us may not take a career in mathematics, there is absolutely no doubt that we will encounter its form many times in life.

Our school provides a very diverse selection of math courses; ranging from Consumer Math to Calculus. The value of these courses in pertinence to College Preparatory Classes cannot be stressed quite enough. As Mr. Carter said, "Attending mathematical classes will prepare you for college, which is of utmost importance." Though taking a mathematical course involves much effort and dedication, the rewards are a beneficial and valuable gain.

On the Right Track

Student teachers were the brave people who took over a class or two for one semester. They used their own lesson plans and covered different subject material. While teaching five days a week, the soon-to-be-teachers also were attending school.

One of the student teachers was Mr. Prendergast. He took over Ms. Amstadt's fourth period Contemporary Voices class. He attended San Diego State, and was majoring in literature.

To become a student teacher, you needed to have at least a bachelors degree and a credential in what you wanted to teach. During the second semester, the teachers had three classes, one prep period, and one administrative period. Also, just like any other job, there was a supervisor from San Diego State that came around and observed the student teachers and their classes at work.

Teaching was not always easy, but becoming a student teacher put some people on the right track.

▼ 2. WORKING on correcting papers, Kai Chang helps Mrs. Perez in ESL.

▶ 3. WRITING grades on a roster, Mrs. Gaffney works as an instructional aide.

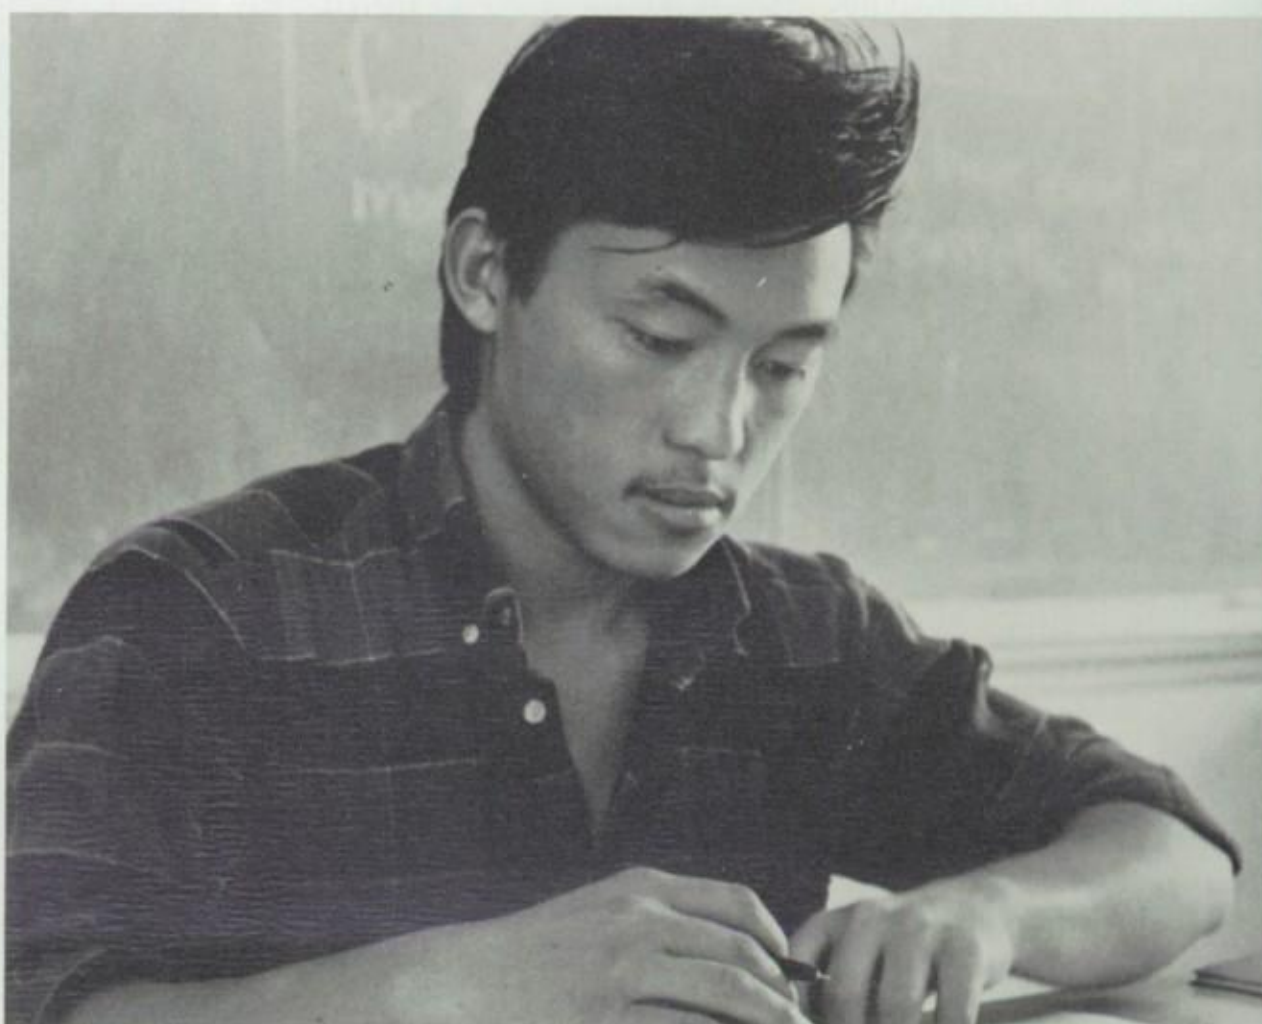

▶ 4. HELPING two students with an assignment, Mrs. Broaded shows them where to find the information.

▼ 5. CAUGHT by the camera, Sue Gee helps Mr. Henry and Mrs. Stewart with a problem.

▼ 6. TEACHING a class for a semester, Mr. Prendergast collects an assignment.

Jet Set Dialogue

Communication is apparent in every race, every culture and in every walk of life. Whether it be spoken language, written, sign or mere body language, all individuals have been blessed with the valuable gift of expression. Being able to learn its different forms is an advantage too great to surpass. So why should we limit ourselves to only one language? Although foreign languages take sincere effort to master, it gives on a tremendous feeling of accomplishment to know that he or she has the ability to converse with international friends.

Besides the fact that it makes it possible to make friends with people of other nationalities, being bilingual or multi-lingual opens the door to many careers. Spanish becomes a most valuable asset when living so near the border. With having Latin neighbors to the south as we do, Spanish skills are handy when it is needed to speak with those of different ethnic backgrounds.

This year the Foreign Language department has made many changes. For one thing they have omitted German and acquired French once more. The students showed much enthusiasm and greatly welcomed the arrival of French. Many positive results may be expected from this transition.

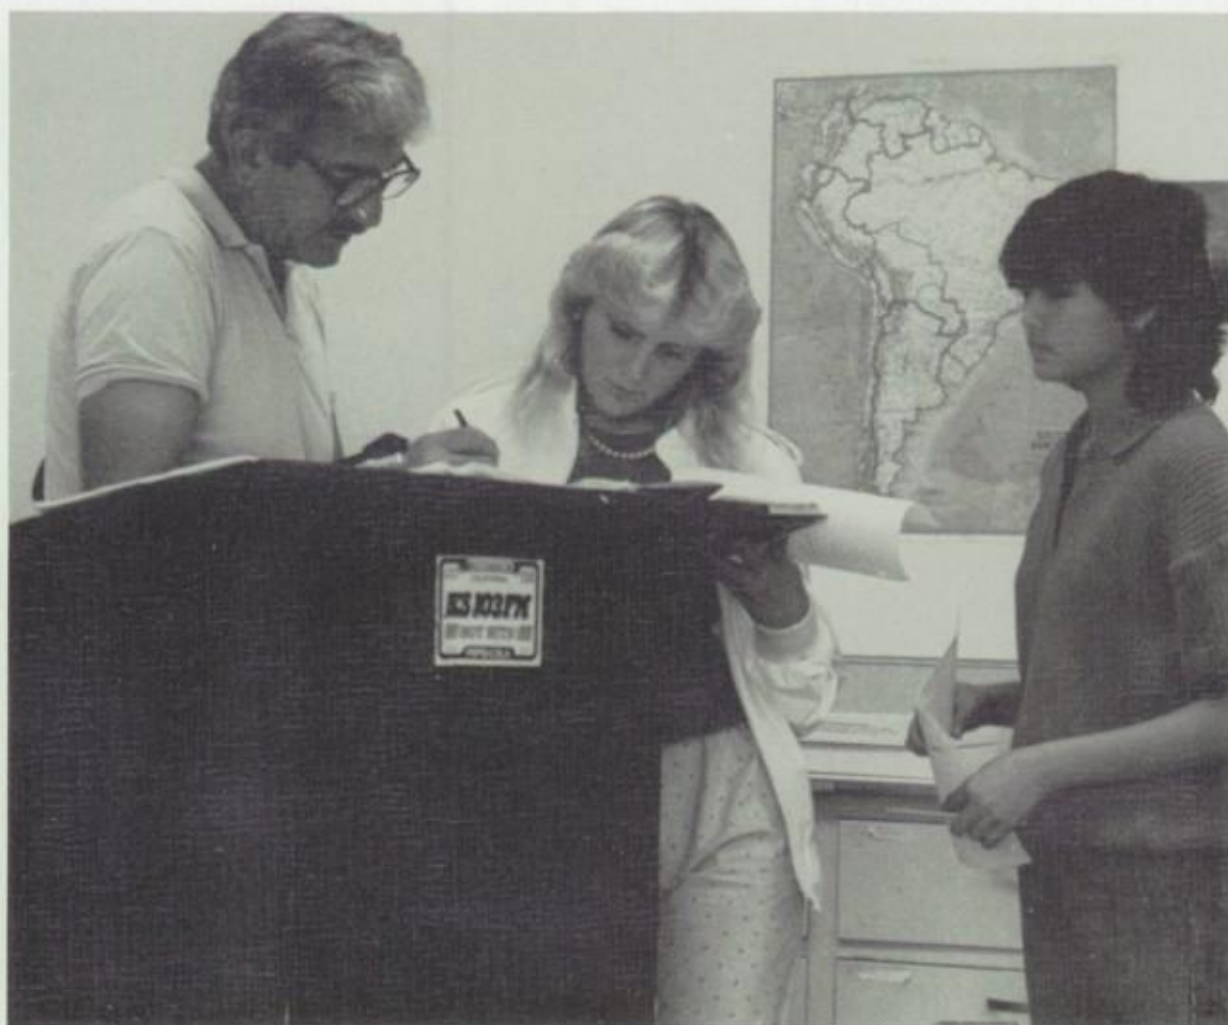

◀ 1. SURPRISED by the camera, Mr. Hernandez shows us how hard he works in A.S.B.

▼ 2. TEACHING the telling of time in any language is never easy, but Mrs. Heaberlin handles it with ease.

▼ 3. EXHIBITING his tolerance, Mr. Peterson waits for his class to quiet down.

Good results were the products that came from hard work and constant effort. These characteristics were the essential keys that made up the prerequisites of becoming an educator. Being a teacher was not an easy task, and extra help was most welcomed when it was available. In helping with the heavy load of the year, instructional aides offered much relief to the teacher and helped to enrich the academic environment by allowing more time to be allocated to each individual student. Instructional aides usually performed such tasks as taking roll, correcting papers, and recording grades. They also worked in the Chapter One Lab, which helped students who had difficulties in English. They were also to be encountered in the Library, the counseling office, and the attendance office, always ready to offer their skills to those who needed help.

Becoming an instructional or teacher's aide took motivation, and much incentive. They filled out numerous applications, and were required to take and pass a test. In doing so, they were eligible for interviews and then possibly hired.

Everlasting Pain

Muscles were sore, and the gasping of students could be heard throughout the campus. Shrieks of pain echoed through the school as students stretched for what was to be their daily school routine . . . they had taken P.E.! Suited up and ready to go, pupils became suddenly colorful in a variety of hues, modeling maroon sweats here and there, and catching a fellow student's eye with a green sweatshirt. After the moans and groans of warm-up were over, a variety of sports activities took hold of the Physical Education Department. Sports were diversified, ranging from badminton to touch football. Each required effort on the student's behalf, but could be mastered with the correct amount of practice. For those who chose a little more of a challenge, seventh period P.E. became available for the sports-oriented individual. In this period, people were being trained as a team to represent the school in district meets. Each team worked with unsurmountable stride, and never failed to make us proud as the sports season rolled around. Such teams included: Track, Wrestling, Basketball, Football, and Soccer to name some of the more popular.

Finishing with Style

*T*here was a lump in the throat and the gleam of a tear, but the pride has out-weighted the sorrow. The need to look ahead had become greater and the red carpet of the future had awaited to be trodden upon. All eyes looked ahead and reflected on destiny. Let no one say that a tear or the soft essence of laughter was not left behind. Whether in anguish or in joy, the expressions were imprinted on that golden book of the past. What remains are the special marks. How it was finished was how it begun . . . in style.

When the waves shoot up, and the feeling's right, one can be sure that senior Mark Thurston is taking his place among the others who share a fondness for one of the world's most popular sports . . . surfing. "I started in the 6th grade," explains this early accomplished athlete. "I started to learn because it was a lot of fun." It's obvious that Mark's interest went beyond that feeling of amusement, for he now enters several surf competitions; all of which he's never failed to place. He's been competing for three years now, which has helped him in accomplishing his goal as a member of the NSSA National Team. This organization consists of the top fifteen amateur surfers in the U.S.A., which is quite an honor bestowed upon this young athlete.

Wearing the latest in fashion, Stephanie Downey and Robbie Trice stand out as the couple with the hottest look in clothes.

The sweat, the work, the glory that became theirs in a well-earned victory kept their spirits flying in sports. Maria Collins and Steve Daley have earned yet another triumph as the most athletic in the school; they've won above the rest.

His wit and humor brought a smile to even the most stern of teachers, and he left behind him a path of laughter. Chuckie Feariby with his boisterous demeanor, can truly be merited as the 85-86 class clown.

Alma Mater

All hail to Alma Mater,
We praise thy noble name.
There'll never be another
Whose faith we'll all proclaim.

Thy memories we'll cherish

Though years go by
So hail our school forever

Reaching for Success

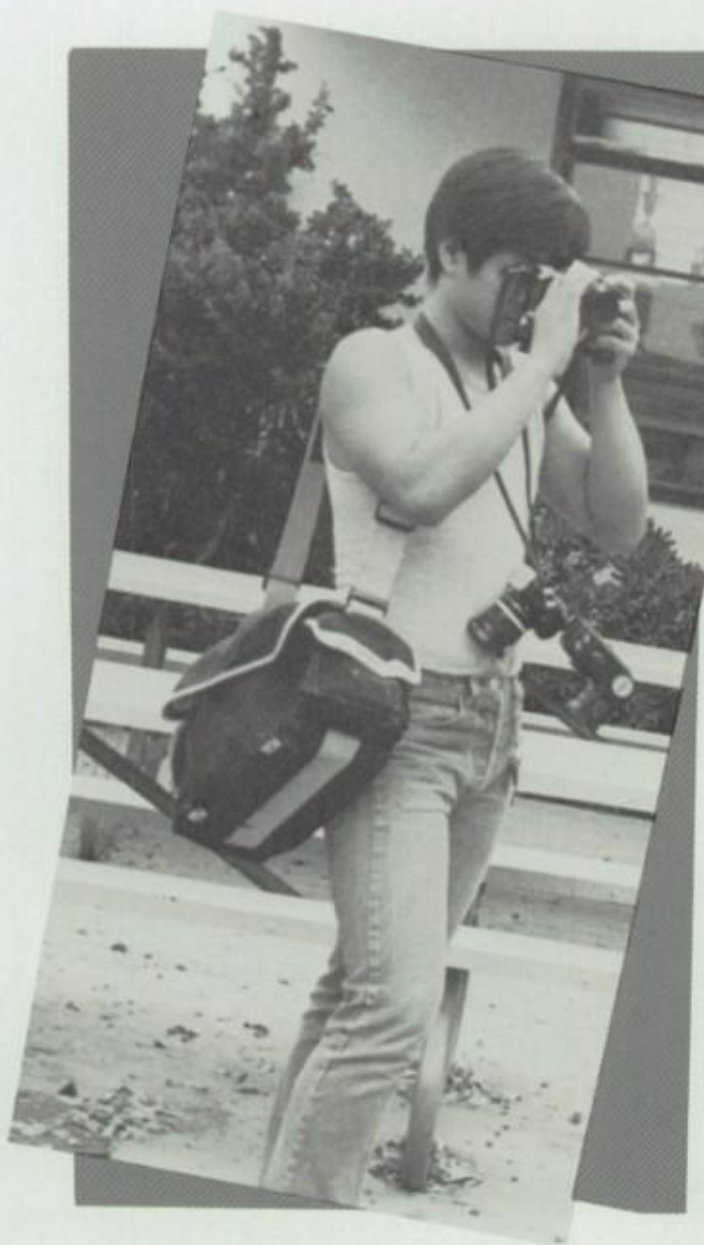

Interwoven with the material of different people, they form the backbone of a strong social school life. They are the cheers that echo at a football game, the performers who emotionally express themselves on the stage. They are the strong representatives of academic ambitions, expressions of a young person who want to make that vital difference in society. Never do they cease in their quest for a fuller life; one in which teamwork serves as the fuel on the long road of accomplishments. They strive with vigor, never losing the dazzle of spirit, for they are constantly reaching for success.

Headlines and Deadlines

Endurance, responsibility, maturity; these are the essential ingredients that make up the batter of a well equipped yearbook staff. It was facing the deadlines and knowing that everything was to be done in utmost perfection that served as the fuel for their undying motivation. This year, the staff was well prepared with good writers, talented photographers, and the air of creativity. With all of these skills combined, the only possible product could be an annual that would excell all others.

The staff is what makes things come together, but in every group, there is always a devoted leader. Joni Alberto, Editor-in-Chief, summed up her role in the following statement: "Being editor is a big job . . . there's a lot of responsibility . . . however, there's a good side to it — you get things done the way you prefer."

We are all born with some sort of talent, whether it be in writing, or working with equipment. However, utilizing these skills is one of the most important factors to consider. This is precisely why certain members of the staff were selected to attend the SCSPA Yearbook Camp from August 11-16 at USD. These fortunate people were returning staffers Joni Alberto, Robert Russ, and Rhonda Sparks, as well as newcomer Jodie Sackett. This experience contributed a lot to the staff; it gave them new and creative ideas and special techniques on how to use their skills to the best advantage. With assets such as these and many others, this year's staff was unquestionably strong. As Joni said, "This year's staff knows what they want, and that's what I really need!!"

▲ AFTER HOURS of hard work, Adriana Alvarez reads her copy for Robert Russ and Joni Alberto.

◀ WORKING DILIGENTLY on the Varsity Cheer copy, Erin Dugan makes sure every word is perfect.

Dom Dom Power

Leading a wave of restless and hopeful football fans throughout this season was an impressive and motivated group of Varsity Cheerleaders, doing what they do best. They obviously put a lot of hard work into perfecting their cheers. This was crucial for their success so that all the patterns could be clearly seen and appreciated by those observing. Cheerleading is by no means just an extra-curricular activity; it is a team effort which is very demanding, requires earnest commitment, but is none the less fun.

Monday through Friday for up to four hours a day, the squad practiced over summer. Even though they were not really geared up for Cheer Camp, a three day concentrated training with other schools from all over the district, the girls still came out with blue ribbons for all three days. In addition to this, they all received "spirit sticks" for honorary spirit, and out of the three hundred participants, Traci Amano and Heather Moses were recognized for having the most outstanding leadership. Cheer Camp proved to be enjoyable and beneficial for all those involved.

The strongest squad in five years was led by Darla Williams with the assistance of De-loreve Cruz, both of whom were returning cheerleaders. Other returning members included Traci Amano, as the secretary, and Tracey Jenkins and Laura Bidwell who had moved up from the prior year's J.V. All the girls exemplified qualities of leadership and dedication, and were motivated and outgoing. The cheer advisor, Margot Collins, feels that "anyone can be a cheerleader," but it does take a special kind of confidence and coordination. These girls certainly had these characteristics.

◀ PRIOR TO THE GAME against Pt. Loma, the entire squad fires up the lunchtime crowd.

Cheering Proudly

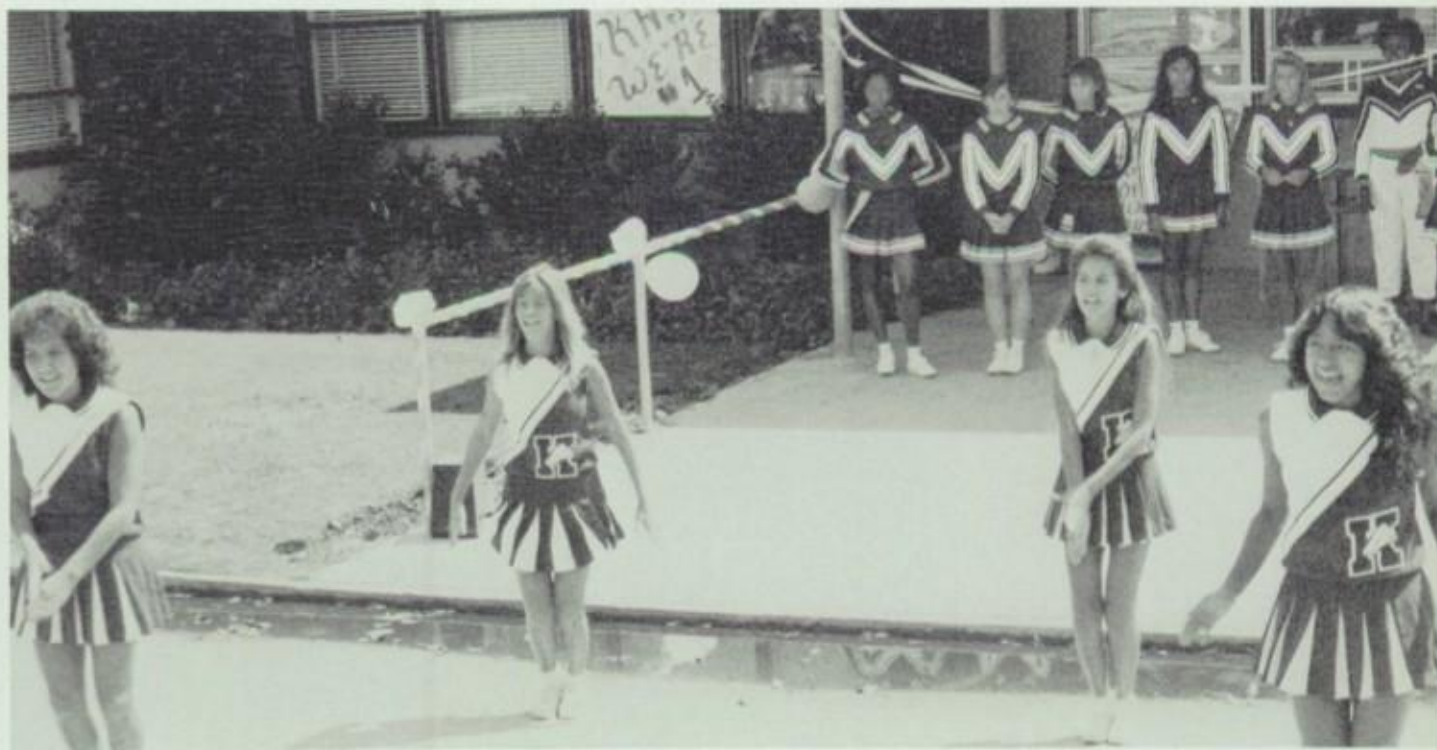

Incredible enthusiasm and vitality was displayed by the Junior Varsity Cheerleading squad throughout the year. Headed by Julie Casas and with a rotating co-head, they worked hard, creating a great support for the J.V. football team.

Margot Collins, the Cheer advisor, felt that all the girls were strong in different ways. All of them got along and worked together easily. One key to their success was their ability to take criticism well and use it to their best advantage. Another important part of their good season was Pop Warner Cheer experience. This gave every girl a strong background in basic skills. After an extensive training period during summer, they all attended Cheer Camp, placing high as a team and receiving ribbons for superiority and excellence. This boosted their morales and offered them an even greater initiative to perform well.

Perhaps the best thing the squad had going for itself was its remarkable stamina and spirit. The girls were willing to break tradition; to do anything to put on the best, most exciting show they could. This unique attitude and their positive outlook will ensure us to have excellent cheerleaders for years to come.

Talk To Me!

Ribbons reading "Who You are Makes a Difference" were seen all over the campus during Brotherhood Week. People wearing four or five, even fifteen or sixteen ribbons could be found with no trouble at all. The idea for these little signs was to make people feel better about themselves and feel better about the people around them. Who was responsible for this activity and many others like it? The people known as Peer Counselors.

If there was one thing the Peer Counseling club lacked this year, it was time; they kept themselves quite busy. One of their biggest events of the year was a celebration of Brotherhood Week from February 18 to 21. Brotherhood Week is a national event asking people from all walks of life to accept each other. Activities ranging from a root beer guzzle to courtesy Day highlighted the week. In addition to this event, canned food was raised by the students to help local families during Christmas, and as a result of Peer Counselors Marc Henning and Rinae Rausch, a Students Against Drunk Driving chapter was started at our school. The club also visited local elementary schools as Cross Age Role Models, answering young childrens' questions about what awaits them in high school. Finally, on April 23 they participated in a Youth Conference with many other schools from San Diego. The purpose of this meeting was to exchange ideas for clubs and activities with other schools and to know the people of those schools on a more social, rather than competitive, level.

"Working together" is a theme that Peer Counseling followed closely. No single person did all of the work in this club; everyone contributed to reach the big goal of Peer Counseling: to make Kearny a better place. With the leadership of people like Deanne Whitbeck, Bertha Jacoste, and Angie McGue and the advice of Mr. Thomas Franklin, it is no surprise that they met and surpassed that goal.

Leaders of the Pack

Hard work and determination are two characteristics of the Associated Student Body. They showed these and other characteristics this year with many achievements ranging from school improvements to successful recreation activities.

Carrying on the tradition begun by last year's school officers, our ASB corrected many eye sores around the campus such as repainting the boys and girls bathrooms and installing mirrors and doors in the boys bathrooms. Other achievements included boarding up old and useless lockers, painting a new mural in the gym over the old "Komet Kountry" mural, and renovating the Sophomore patio.

In addition to school improvement, ASB focused on school activities. There were many more dances this year than in the past, including a very successful Homecoming dance and game. According to ASB President Alex Nguyen "Homecoming takes a lot of time in the first part of the year: from nominations and planning the parade to finding a place for the dance, decorations, and a good DJ." Towards the end of the year, many assemblies were planned. These assemblies included a talent show and a presentation from the Padres about the adversities of drug abuse.

Whenever an organization makes great achievements, there are always certain people who were the keys to getting the work done. Alex, as ASB President, said that her job was rewarding, yet also quite stressful. "It'll give you gray hair!!" is how she summed up her office. She had the fine assistance of people like David Hoffman, Traci Amano, and Khue Nguyen. These people were willing to put in time before and after school when needed, and put a 100% effort into reaching their goals. It was these and the other members of the ASB that made their organization as strong as ever.

Journalists

"We are a much more relaxed group than last year" was the feeling of Galaxy Co-Editor Andre White about his fellow journalists. Andre and his partner in the editor's job, Tami Souders, published a strong and improved newspaper. They achieved this with many assets such as improved artwork, writing, and photography.

Good writing is the backbone of any strong newspaper. According to both editors, their best writer, and hardest worker, was Tammy Kemp. In her first year as a Galaxy writer, Tammy was a big plus. In addition to excellent writing, every newspaper needs good photography. Mark Price and Karen Deal handled this area of the newspaper with great skill. "Our pictures were the best we have had for a long time" said Tami about the job Galaxy photographers did.

Everyone had the opinion that the newspaper was strengthened greatly by the help of advisor Margaret Broaded and Graphic Arts instructor Dean Jones. Ms. Broaded put in many hours all year long to help her staff put the pieces together the right way before it went to the press. When it came to using the offset presses, Mr. Jones was there with the advice needed to troubleshoot any problems they had.

There were many new faces on the staff who should return next year. With this and many other things in their favor, we should see, as we saw this year, a sparkling newspaper in the future.

Loud and Clear

Enthusiasm and dedication spelled success for the speech team. With all of their hard work, it was loud and clear that this was definitely one of our finest speech teams in years.

According to speech instructor Jackie Singer, her group of students had many things in their favor. In addition to the above mentioned characteristics, Mrs. Singer described the team as "a well balanced, bright group of kids that worked beautifully together." This team work was shown in their first place ranking at the city wide group discussion tournament on October 24. Excellent and superior ratings were commonplace among Kearny's speakers at this extremely competitive tournament. Other events included the Lions Club and Rotary Club speech competitions which featured many of our students. This was a competition for scholarships, as was the Voice of America speech contest won by Adriana Alvarez. Susan Aragaki, Sherry Glynn, and Damon Lou placed as runners up in that tournament.

When asked who the outstanding student on the team was, Mrs. Singer said, without a doubt, Adriana Alvarez was her strongest speaker. She took first place in nearly every competition she was in and showed true dedication with many before and after school hours spent practicing. Other standouts included Jim Rydelski, Heather Furcolo, Erin Dugan, and Susan Aragaki. Although these were the best, Mrs. Singer added that there were no bad kids on the team; everyone was willing to work.

To say that the speech team was a good, hardworking bunch would be an understatement. Mrs. Singer summed up the year in regard to the team by stating that "undoubtedly, they were the strongest team I've coached in 8 years. They made me proud!"

Tough Act to Follow

Shrinking membership and scheduling difficulties caused many problems for the Marquee Club. However, in spite of these set backs, the hard working actors and actresses of this organization were able to put the pieces together and have a banner year.

A wide range of activities were offered for Marquee Club members to participate in. Fifty people from our school helped out the Balboa Park Haunted Museum during the week of Halloween. According to Jack Winans, the Marquee Club advisor, his students did an excellent job in this elaborate event. AGNES OF GOD was presented as the Christmas play featuring Michelle Smith, Ali Rosenbluth, and Sunny McDaniel. Sunny, who played Agnes, accepted her part only three days before opening night on December 11. The reviews for all three actresses, especially Sunny, were superb and the play went over beautifully. On February 15, Marquee competed in an Acting Seminar at the School of Creative and Performing Arts. Their performance included excerpts from AGNES OF GOD, A CHORUS LINE, and SISTER MARY IGNATIUS EXPLAINS IT ALL FOR YOU. Although they only placed fifth, everybody had good feelings about the competition. The traditional Supper Theater took the stage from March 18-20. This fun filled and light hearted performance featured many excerpts from the Acting Seminar. Finally, the Pulitzer Prize winning play CRIMES OF THE HEART was featured in May as the Spring play.

Acting out the previously mentioned plays and dances was a gifted and hard working group of performers. People like Teresa Hickok, Mike Brizuela, Annalisa Vonklipstein, Michelle Smith, and Kim Robinson were among the talented members of Marquee. When asked who his most outstanding students were, Mr. Winans proudly gave this honor to Stephanie Milsap and Shari Boone. "Both of them have a great attitude about acting. I'm so glad that I had both Stephanie and Shari working with me," commented Mr. Winans about his stars.

All in all, it was a very successful year for Marquee. Mr. Winans is expecting many people back next year and has begun recruiting prospective actors, actresses, singers, and dancers from local junior high schools. This should promise an excellent Marquee Club to take the stage in the future.

Choral Encounter

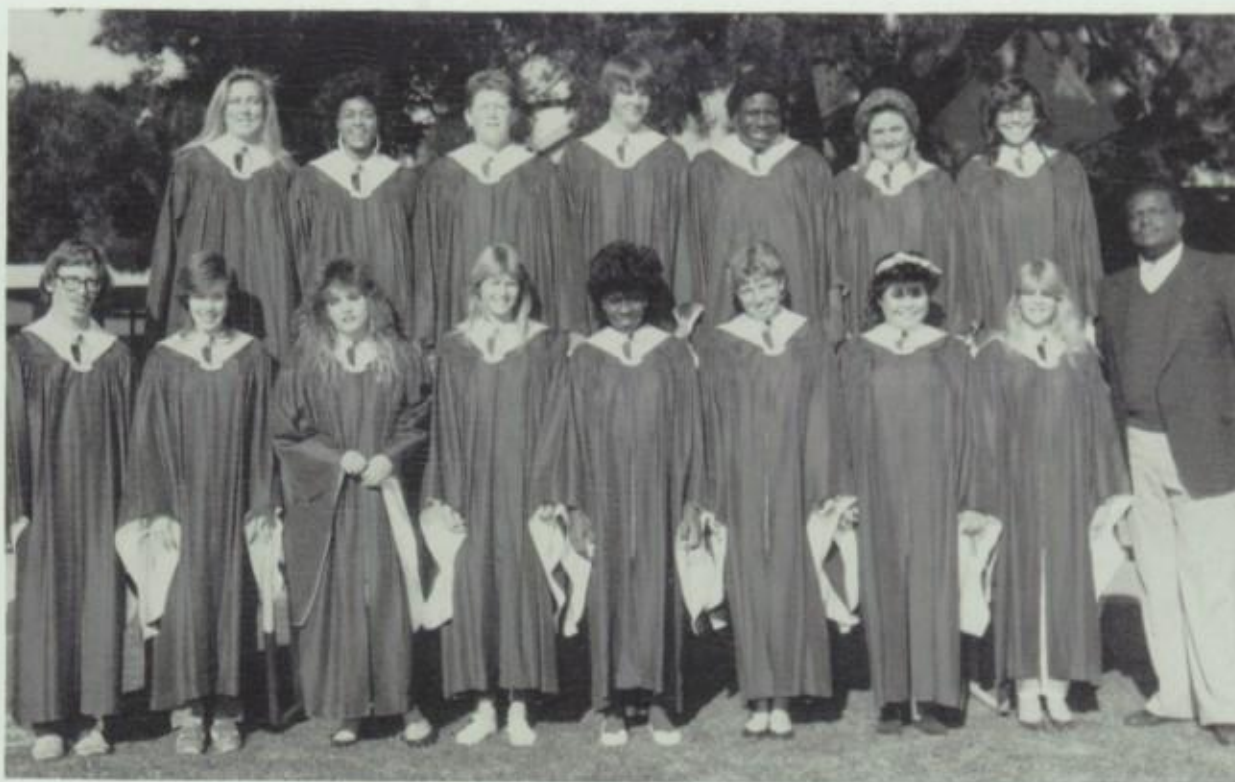

There was a sharp contrast between the A Cappella Choir of the past and that of this year. Coming off of four successful years under Barney Norman's direction (5 superior ratings, 2 excellents) and 40 consecutive years of strength, the 41st year was less than satisfying.

"I wanted to end the choir on a 'good note' at 40 years in 1985. I was forced into having the 41st year, and it was quite disappointing." These were Mr. Norman's feelings about the Choir. Lack of student interest was the reason for such a weak year. "In the past, we had a lot of determination and interest. That, first and most importantly, is what made the Choir work. This year we lacked interest, and it really showed."

Although it was a weak year, there were some shining spots as well. Fawn Starman and Matt Wilbur did an excellent job sharing the duties of the presidency. They arranged fund raisers, and scheduled the Christmas caroling in Fashion Valley and Seaport Village. Working diligently beside them were Secretary Michelle Tilton, piano accompanist Kathy Graham, and Laura Latus. Towards the end of the year, some modern and pop music numbers were being arranged in addition to the traditional music.

This year was possibly the final year for the Choir at our school. In spite of the hard work of Barney Norman and the above mentioned people, lack of team work has proven to be disastrous for this club. Mr. Norman summed up the Choir's disappointing year with the following statement: "I've done all I can. I've faught and faught, to make it work."

The 41st Ensemble

"I haven't had a lick of problems with these guys" is what Band Director Barney Norman had to say about his musicians. Although starting their 41st year a bit small and slowly, with a great deal of before and after school work, they built up the band and had a commendable season.

Parades were the main focusing point of the Marching Band. They participated in numerous parades in places like La Jolla, and Oceanside during Christmas time. The highlight of the year would have to be taking first place at the Pacific Beach parade on December 14. The banner and flag corps performed at Sea World on March 22. Mr. Norman is expecting many of his young flag and band members to return next year and make a good foundation for the band.

First year Drum Major Ray Wilgeroth did an excellent job organizing the band in the first semester. He drilled them until they were prepared for any competition they had. Towards the end of the year, most of the leadership duties shifted from the drum major to the president. Rhonda Sparks, as president, continued the hard work begun by Ray. She organized many important fund raisers and led the band through the symphonic season. Ray and Rhonda had the fine assistance of people like Secretary Marichu Abueg, Treasurer Michelle Barnes, V.P. Michelle Ruhrop, and saxophone player Dan Simons. It was people like these that helped give the band that needed boost.

With everything against them in September, the band truly showed character by tying together some loose ends and having a good season. Mr. Norman stated that with all their hard work, he was happy with his band. "I wasn't expecting much from them. But they worked hard and accomplished a lot in short period of time. They were great!"

ATTENTION — HUT!

Any club at any school must work as a team to reach their goals. This is probably most true for the Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps. The JROTC is designed to prepare it's cadets for the military. This year's group of military trainees learned how valuable team work and other attributes are.

Color Guard, Fancy Drill Squad and other teams of the JROTC performed at the Homecoming prior to the game and during half-time. In addition to this, the color guard competed at Balboa Park in the early part of the year, and the drum corps performed in late May. "Spring Camp" took place March 16-22. Spring Camp was a program offered by Camp Pendleton where, judging by test scores and grade point average, the elite cadets for the entire county were selected to experience a boot camp type week. This proved to be a unique and educational experience for all those involved. It showed them what the military held in store for them.

Although the JROTC is a lot of work, there was still plenty of time for fun. From September to December, our school's battalion competed in a softball tournament with the boys team taking second place and the girls placing third. On November 2, a city wide picnic was held. Fun events like a wheel barrow race, tug of war, balloon toss, and a pie eating contest were part of the good times. Their year ended with the JROTC Ball on May 13. This had always proven to be a great time and was not disappointing this time around either.

Many people helped bring the JROTC into one strong unit. Among them was Cadet Lt. Col. Kou Yang. "He taught us persuasive, instead of dictatorial leadership" was the popular opinion from the cadets. Kou's second in command, Cadet Maj. Mitzie Murphy, helped him out with discipline and the instruction of basic military skills. People like these and the two adult leaders of JROTC, Sgt. Maj. Pendor and Lt. Col. Hestor, are the ones who helped make this program the success that it always has been.

Selling for the Future

To produce leaders in the field of marketing and to train students for a future career; this is the goal of the Distributive Educational Clubs of America. In only its second year on our campus, DECA made great strides beyond what it accomplished in its rookie year.

Their year began with a Delegates Conference in October at Sacramento. This was where the entire state elected their district and state officers. All DECA members had a great time at this first conference of the year. Their next conference was at Grossmont High School and was a city wide competition. The second competition was on a district level; third was a State Conference, then finally the National Conference in Atlanta for only the elite DECA competitors.

There was a wide selection of competition areas from which DECA members chose, ranging from advertising to food marketing. In each of these areas, there were two levels to select from; Master Employee or Supervision. After each student selected his or her area, they went to the competitions where they were given a 100 question written exam, a role play, and either a second role play or an essay. Our chapter of DECA faired well in all conferences attended. Highlights included Heidi Johnson coming in 2nd place on the written test, Tina Covington finishing among the finalists for her written exam, and Denise Fuller being an overall finalist.

Although strong in its first year, having experienced members this year was undoubtedly a big plus. These people helped guide the newer members along. Another asset was their emphasis on fund raisers and community awareness. DECA sold all sorts of products, from cookies and candy to pumpkins at Halloween. With the help of Stumps Market, DECA bought a needy family in our community Thanksgiving dinner. Jean Pucci, DECA advisor said that this type of thing was what made this club strong.

Leading DECA was their organized president, Denise Fuller. "She doesn't wait to be told what to do. She always asks 'What's next?'" Mrs. Pucci commented about Denise's hard work. She had the valuable help of people such as Kobe Le Moine and Tina Golagoski. They helped organize most of the fund raisers and kept financial matters straight for their club. With as strong a start as this club has had, we can be sure to see DECA for years to come.

Politics and Prowess

Planning for the future is a necessary part of every high school student's life. Decisions about careers and college arise and must be dealt with. A number of students have begun to prepare for the future with the help of two different organizations; one focusing on educational needs of the future, the other emphasizing political education.

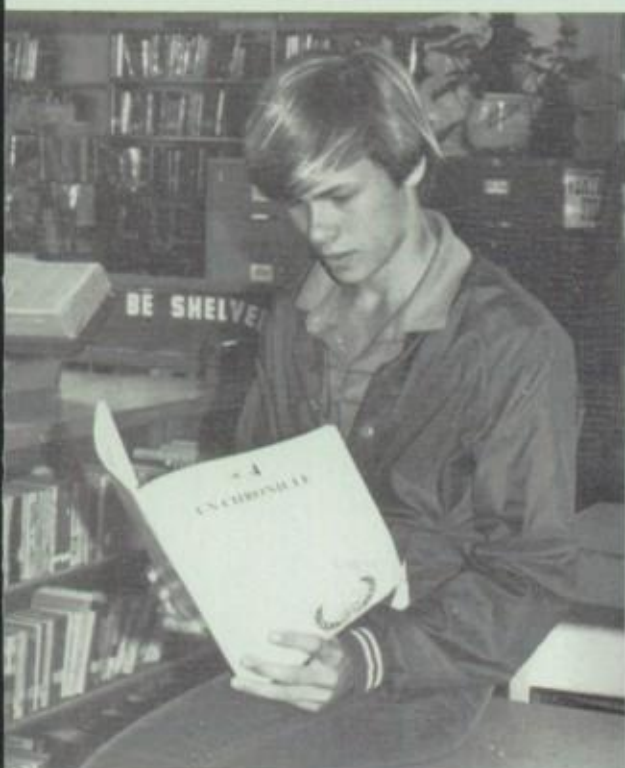

Lack of participation was a big problem of the California Scholarship Federation. Conflicting schedules made activities few and far between. However, the new CSF advisor, Dan Viks, President Kevin Alsop, and Vice President Thomas Tanida were able to get a number of things accomplished. New American flags were supplied to the classrooms, compliments of CSF, and a variety of fund raisers were undertaken by these scholars, including a stuffed animal sale during Valentines Day. The money raised was used to visit universities around San Diego like UCSD and SDSU.

Although getting off to a late start in February, the enthusiastic Model United Nations team was still able to make a respectable showing. The Model UN program is designed to have the students involved learn how countries relate to each other and have a better view on international affairs. Mike Hall, first year Model UN advisor, had to start his team from scratch, but said that they had many things in their favor. "We have a lot of interested and hardworking people. Hopefully next year we will get an earlier start." In late March, the team attended a conference at SDSU representing one of the smaller countries offered. This should give these students the needed experience to come back next year with a much more powerful team. All of the people involved in both CSF and the Model UN learned many lessons through their experiences which should prove to be valuable in college and later in life.

In a Class by Itself

*T*he first step has been subdued; so many more to climb. They gaze through the window of another year, and hopes flood eager hearts. The plans, the dreams, all there to grab and to keep in the safeness of the expecting soul. The young they are not, and far from antiquated . . . yet they hold true to their unique identity. They are the middle; the heart. Their rhythmic beat echoes pumping its energy through the corners of the school. Bathed in the light of the extra-ordinary vigor, they stand in a class by itself.

Go for the Gold

Beats of sweat, exhaustion . . . the common friend. They constantly strive, not knowing a limit, believing in themselves . . . having faith in the team. The tears and the laughter, solely wrought from hard work, oh the dreams . . . too good to come true? Yes, a dream lies ahead of them waiting to be conquered, a dream they will grasp and always keep alive. They have within themselves the spirit to succeed, the strength to overcome, the power to go for the gold.

The gates opened and suddenly hundreds of screaming students, alumni and proud parents rushed to grab the best seats. Once the seats were occupied, the slowly passing seconds were counted 'til the kick-off.

In the locker room the coach gave the typical before-the-game-speech. The players let the words flow in one ear and out the other as they eagerly awaited the call to the field, hoping to claim another victory for themselves and their school.

As the first players entered onto the field, the crowd bubbled over with the excitement that had been held in until the first show of action. The long awaited moment had arrived. The ball was sent skyrocketing toward the opposing team as the roars of enthusiasm issued forth from the stands.

The hopes of winning the title of League Champ and going to the CIF games were in the mind of every person both on the field and off. But this year these dreams were being aided by the winning attitudes and teamwork of team members such as Kevin Archer, James Courtney, Steve Daley, and Rob Skinner.

The team had a lot to prove both to themselves and the other high schools; that just because last year's team made it to CIF didn't mean that this year's team couldn't. The team's strength and stamina had to be built.

A knee injury to QB Ron Bradley during a game against Patrick Henry early in the season shocked the players. Immediately doubts clouded their minds ... What will we do now? Will we be able to go on? But Scott Welish put both team and fans at ease. Taking over for Ron, Scott swept the team to a smashing victory.

With players such as those, it's almost inevitable to escape the season without leaving behind countless memories of excellent sportmanship.

The team may not have been undefeatable, but one quality that they could not possibly lose was their dignity and teamwork that made them a strong team in every aspect.

TOUCHDOWN !

Pushing, preparing and building a good team that will hopefully make a great team for Varsity is what J.V. football is all about. The effort that is put into creating CIF players starts here. This is where the hard work and first tastes of victory begins and pays off.

"The first time the offense scored was the most exciting and memorable time in the season", said Rudy Peralta. This great moment was a 97 yard touchdown by Eric Mercado against the Patrick Henry Patriots. Even though the team's record was 2 wins and 3 losses, the team showed much enthusiasm and vitality for their sport.

Although many players on the team played Pop Warner football, there was a big step to be taken to play on a high school team. The team needed to have experience. Coach Hernandez helped the team gain this needed experience, and aided the team in taking that big step to high school sports. With the majority of the team going to Varsity next year, the season promises to be full of surprises.

They walked into a gym with over 40 other girls, instilled with the knowledge that only 12 would prevail for Varsity. This was it — the big moment . . . there was no turning back for any of them now. All their concentration was focused on their form and their moves, trying so sincerely to impress the coach by displaying the best of their skills. One could feel each person's desire to become a member of the team. Such was the start of this year's season.

Volleyball is a very difficult sport and requires a lot of good training. Although all of the girls who made the team are very strong in their sport, several of them furthered their training at a special week-long camp designed to better their skills. These girls, Maria Collins, Diana Gleason, Rosie Putnam and Kammie Williams returned from their week at SDSU to start off the season with much leadership and new skills to help their teammates.

The team suffered a major loss early in the season when Susan Marcelino, an exceptional passer and defensive player, broke her wrist during a practice session. Despite this accident, however, the players were not set back in the long run and continued making progress throughout the year.

Those who did not make this year's Varsity will be well prepared to begin a successful season next year, returning hopefully to claim victory for our school.

SIDEOUT !

A team that strives to achieve assists a coach tremendously in improving the team's performance. This characteristic could not escape unnoticed in Coach Douglas' observations, for a trait such as this deserves much recognition. "Having a big team helps the players out," she commented. She believes it gives every ambitious player a chance to have the experience of playing and improving. But keep in mind that it was not only the quantity of the team that served as valuable, but the quality as well.

Leading this year's team were Trisha Heil and Michelle McLaughlin. They helped the team to subdue their major hardship — nervousness.

The inexperience of the team and the tension that goes into performing and competing for a crowd contributed immensely to the problem at hand.

Another strong player noted for her intense blocks and tremendous kills was Cathy Graham.

An injury to one of the team's valuable players, Lori Coruthers, shrunk the team's confidence and morale. They soon sprung back, though, for spirits were again flying when Karen Hicks added her special touch in skill and determination.

What this team lacked in experience, they made up for in determination and hard work. If the efforts of the girls are present in next season's hopeful team, the season is almost guaranteed to be special.

Starting the season off with an outstanding victory against Mission Bay proved to be a spectacular event that triggered an exciting year for this year's Cross Country team. Each member contributed a flying spirit, which was obvious in the very quality of the team's athletic stamina and sportsmanship.

Some of the outstanding members of the team included seniors Minute Barragan, Ralph Montgomery, Barry Shipman and Marcell Tongco. They illustrated the determination and outstanding effort that may be expected in a true athlete. The girls also did well this year, for with all of their tremendous contributions combined, their immense improvement throughout the year could hardly be ignored. Outstanding members included Lupe Cesena, Alena Dehzad, Cheryl Gifford, Kristy Meze, and Sonia Valle. They led the team as the top runners, accomplishing excellent time at the meets. Since most of the prime runners are juniors and sophomores, their participation in next year's team will make them by far one of the strongest teams in the district.

40 LOVE

Ping! Ping! Ping! . . . This sound is followed by the sight of a flying yellow object. The judge calls out, "40-love". The next point scored brings the players to the net to congratulate themselves on a game well played. Regardless of who won, the girls feel exhilarated after racing round the court to smash the ball back and forth.

"Given the standard of play, we performed the best we could, given the limitations." This quote from Coach Webster reflected the overall picture of this year's girl's tennis team. Though many obstacles had presented themselves, the players managed to pull through the year with relative skill, though not quite reaching their maximum potential. This was mainly due to the fact that there was a lack of proper training facilities, of which most other opponents had as an advantage. This did not stop the team, however, for their drive to succeed was strong enough so as to be recognized as valid competitors.

Some of the most noteworthy players included Joni Alberto, Ratsamy Manixai, and Paloy Keovarongsa. Ratsamy pulled the team through with her intricate skills with the racket, and Joni provided the inspiration for the players to thrive on. Paloy proved quite a valuable asset for she picked up tennis skills with expediency, regardless of the fact that she arrived on the team later than most players.

This year's tennis team's potential was one of great enormity. They did not lack the spirit of competition in any way, though boundaries had presented themselves. We can expect their full force to come through next year, for, undoubtedly there will come many improvements with the gained experience of most players, and with the instinctive pursuit of victory.

FAST BREAK

The crowd anxiously held their breath waiting for the big moment. The seconds seemed interminable and the pressure was unbearable. Finally, the squeeks of rubber soled shoes neared our end of the court. The entire gym seemed spellbound as he easily laid the ball in the net, casting us on to a big win.

The team was a group of young but talented individuals. Their unrelenting drive helped them to a season record of 8 wins to 2 losses. The team's most satisfying win of the streak was 60-43 triumph over La Jolla.

The major scoring threats were Chris Dritz and Chin Duong. The area around the basket was patrolled by Darin Weeks and Corey Bailey, who were known for their victorious rebounding style. And Andrew Chan, the fifth starter, came on late in the season to provide steady play.

Coach Kane credited their name by saying, "These kids are talented. They could be a real force in the San Diego county in two years. But sometimes they are their own worst enemy. All in all they were a group I enjoyed coaching and wish them the best."

The roar of the crowd: the sound of pounding feet; the voices of two coaches cry out, commanding and asking their team to strive for a win.

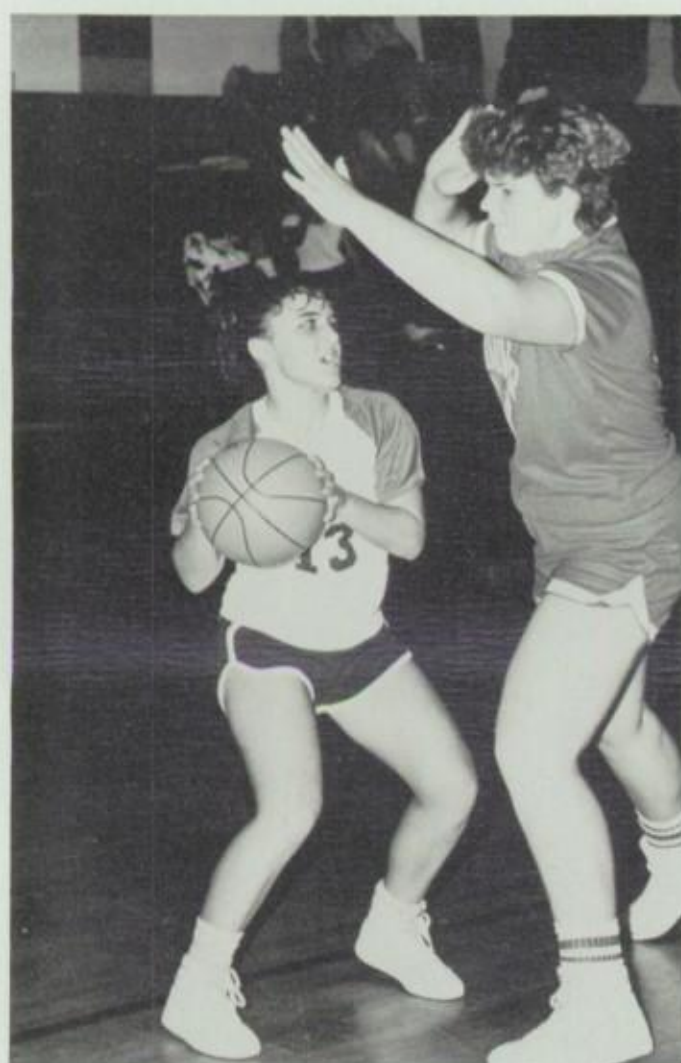

"Having two coaches could be a little confusing and detrimental if egos were involved," said coach Joe Hernandez. Coaches Cohen and Hernandez took equal part in coaching both Varsity and J.V. teams. After a disappointing record last season, the coaches were not expecting much. Forty girls tried out this year and both coaches were pleasantly surprised. They were able to have two teams and even be a strong contender in their sport.

The Varsity team, with ten players, had Maria Doolittle as the highest average scorer and Michelle Newcomer as the best on defense and rebounding. There will be eight returning players next year and coach Hernandez expects at least the same amount of girls to try out again for both Varsity and J.V. teams.

Junior Varsity in particular proved to have a highly competitive spirit, with a good untapped talent. Their potential is enormous for their performance has not quite reached its peak. With a little more team oriented conditioning, great things may be expected for these upcoming Varsity players.

The teams proved to be exceptionally rich in motivation and their spirit did not go unnoticed. With the constant endeavoring that they demonstrated, the school can only look forward to a future of superfluous victories.

TAKE DOWN

The hard work and dedication was paid off through the sweat and pain of grappling with an opponent in the wrestling room. Only the serious-minded and dedicated survived the grueling workouts run by coaches Fairchild and Varner.

Alex Fairchild, a former Kearny graduate and wrestler, donated his valuable time and expertise to the team. Once again, he proved to be the dominant strength for the team.

The team consisted of about forty boys, five of which were sophomores. One sophomore, Victor Lease, earned a varsity letter. The young men out for the team had to be serious and have a desire to accomplish more than the average person. They put themselves through strenuous exercises to prepare themselves for one-on-one competition with other wrestlers.

Some of the outstanding members were Richie Amanonce, Victor Lease and the most improved James Rydelski. Two wrestlers also have a good chance to be all league for two years in a row: Minute Barragan and Marcell Tongco.

All the members of the team strived for the recognition and opportunities that presented themselves. Each person did their best to fulfill their own personal vision quests.

Jumping 3 feet off the ground just to head the ball is just one of the skills you'll see when watching a soccer game. The electricity generated by the team to the spectators explodes into deafening cheers when a goal is made. This is just an example of the emotions you will feel when attending a soccer game.

"Even though this year's team is weaker and younger than previous years," stated Coach Flemming, "It is one of the top three teams I have ever coached." However, the team's youth did not severely impair their ability to play hard and well.

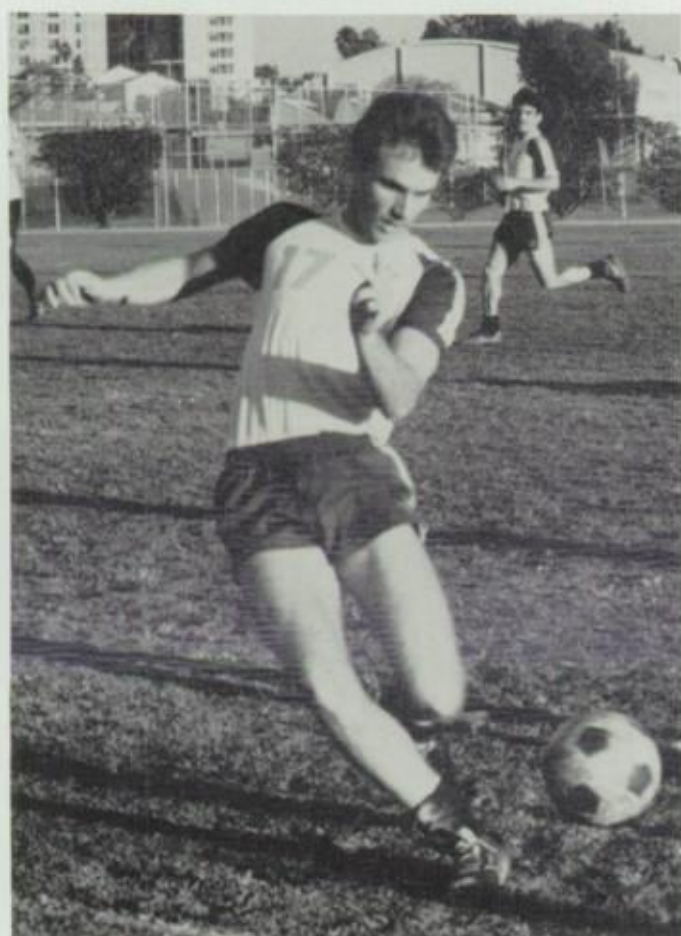

With returning lettermen David Butler, Vinh Chau, Jimmy Roos, Jim Smith, Billy Truong, Trinh Tran, and Ray Wilgeroth, the team's chances of making CIF for the third year in a row were very promising.

Outstanding players were Phomavong Boulevang, Vinh Chau, Martin Donnelly, Jimmy Roos and Jim Smith. They showed exceptional effort the whole year long.

Martin Donnelly came into the team about mid-season and showed exceptional effort and skill to help the defensive squad. Coach Flemming noted that defensive player Jim Smith showed tremendous improvement during the season.

Once again the boys' team showed the high spirits of CIF finals players. Next year seems very promising, for these very skills demonstrated by these young athletes are those found in champions.

▲ USING dynamic skill, Ray Wilgeroth steals the ball from a Madison opponent.

► CHARGING with the ball, Darren Fanelli takes advantage of the wide open field.

▲ WITH all his might, Eric Mercado heaves the ball onto the field.

▼ BLASTING the ball beautifully, Tara Shannon sets up for a key play.

► MAKING another save, Maria Collins kicks the ball downfield for a scoring drive.

HEADS UP!!

The black and white ball blurs across the field; an entanglement of feet greedily fights for the chance to take that ball all the way to the goal. What is the ultimate purpose . . . What goal is this riot trying to reach? Why the field goal, of course, because what the spectators are witnessing here is the girls' soccer team.

Though not one of the most popular sports in the United States, soccer has reached the peak of popularity in school, with the devoted participation of spectators and team members alike.

Some of the most dedicated players this year were Cathy Graham, Erica Lane, Peggy Oberg, and Tara Shannon on offense, and Karen Hicks, Tanya Oates, Rosie Putnam and Kammie Williams on defense. Maria Collins added spirit and pride as she successfully blocked many goal attempts as goalie.

The fact that this team was very competitive proved to be a helpful factor in improving each individual's skills. But the tendency of the girls to work individually led to the team's major weakness: a lack of teamwork.

The advantage of having freshmen play in sports this year greatly increased the competitive attitude that already existed. This added spirit tended to make each girl strive harder to prove herself to her coach and teammates and made for a truly exciting year.

CRACK! Pounding feet are heard and a dust trail is seen as the batter streaks to first base. The base coach signals to keep moving. On to second! Then to third! The action never ceases until the batter is safe at home with the enthusiastic crowd yelling ecstaticly for the first home-run of the season. The first of many more to follow.

This year's varsity team's outlook was a very positive one indeed. Under the guidance of new head coach Gunther the team served as top contenders in the Western League.

Leading the way were co-captains Lupe Ford and Robbie Trice. They provided good leadership and experience for those new players on the team. Other returning players included Scott Welish, Kevin Archer and Cris Ponce.

Coach Gunther said, "Undoubtedly this was the best team Kearny has had in quite a while." This attitude toward baseball continued throughout the season proving our team to be one of the best. From a new coach to new batting cages, the team was definitely hungry for their place among the champions.

► SWINGING with all his might, Robbie Trice hits the winning run.

◀ CONCENTRATING on meeting the glove, Scot Welsh puts forth all his effort.

▲ GIVING his approval of the ball, the umpire gives instructions to Jim Mackey.

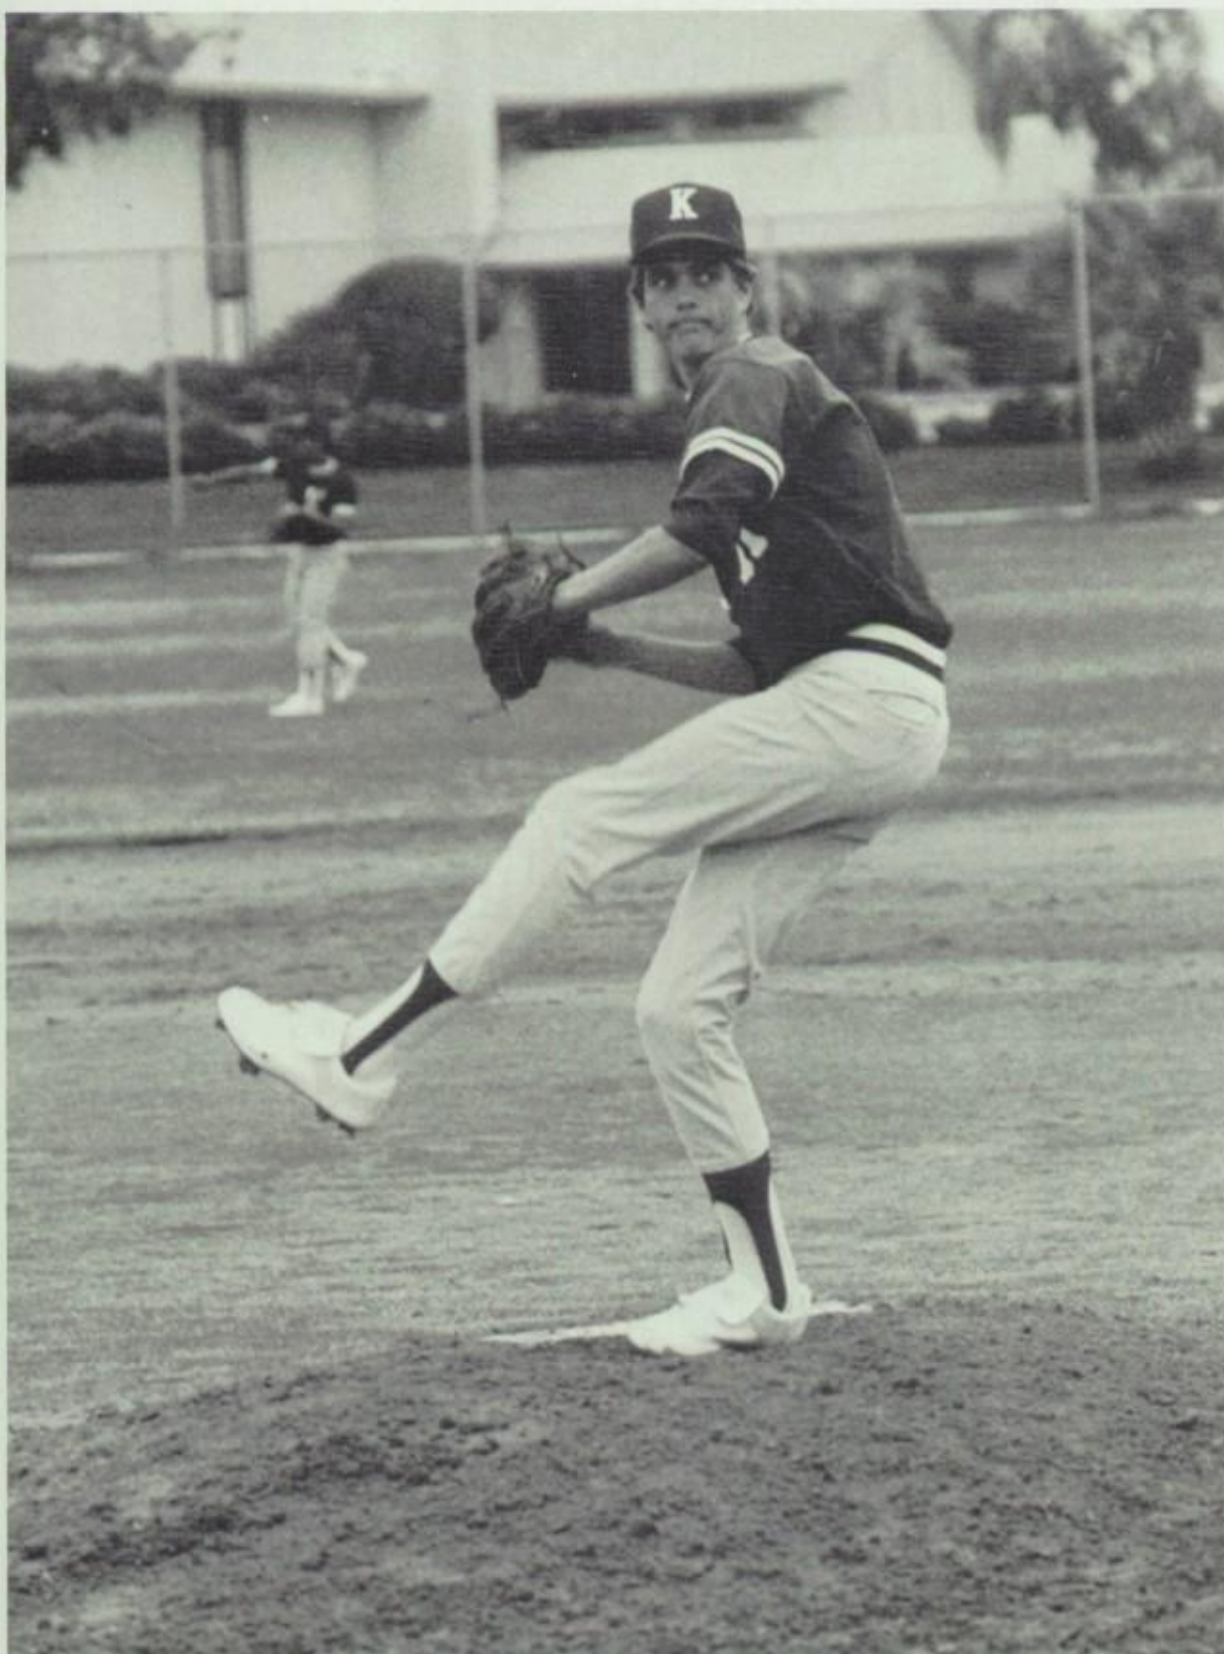

PLAY BALL

Poised single file behind the ranks, with their chins in the air, they're fully prepared to take over the dominant field positions. But the games they play are not just for sport, because they too, are out to take the title, as an outstanding team. A doubt cannot be posed that this team will be competent to fill the shoes of their skilled predecessors, determined athletes of our school.

Coach Troy McLaughlin's positive outlook on this year's season certainly rubbed off on the young squad, not only talented in the diamond, but determined and ambitious. With numerous strong returning players, Carlos Leon and Jim Smith, and quite a few new prospects, the players were able to form an alliance both in line and act to fulfill the expectations for themselves. Their success has been measured by this and the want of the group to learn and achieve greater goals.

It could be taken literally that this year's season was washed up from the start, but only because of the problem with rain. The pre-season wasn't much because of rain-outs. But the varsity and J.V. players weren't about to give up without a fight.

Through teamwork and dedication from both coaches and players, this year's teams walked off the field with pride. First year coaches Bullock and Feldman were a tremendous help to the varsity team. With returning players Laura Bombardo, Maria Collins and Tami Phillips, the team's overall attitude was no problem. First year coach Gilroy had a team of first year players and was only concerned with building a foundation for next year's varsity team. Cyndi Bauer, Sandy Corpus, and Michelle McLaughlin, were helpful in this department.

Working on skill development, strength, teamwork, and discipline helped both teams round off the season with a smile.

ON YOUR MARK

Every year at the beginning of March, walking out to the track, you can hear the sounds of soon-to-be athletes working out. Straining their bodies to go just a little bit farther to succeed. There was a special name for the try out week to see who could hand in there with the best of them. It was called "Hell Week". Coach Joe Cohen was the head coach recruiting many new people this year for an outstanding turnout at tryouts.

The boys' team lost as many as 30 boys last year to graduation and had to rebuild the team. As in all other sports ninth graders were able to participate. Several of the returning players this year were: Minute Barragan and Rudy Peralta running, Steve Daley in shotput, and John Corlett in discus and shotput.

The girls' team came back stronger this year with a fairly experienced group. Supported by faithful athletes like Alina Dehzad, Susan Marcelino, and Michelle Newcomer, the team went right into the season with an optimistic point of view.

Due to the turnout, many athletes participated in a variety of events before settling down to a specific few. The track team continued to do well over the season and is expected to carry on the tradition of tough competition and high spirits in track and field.

SEASON RECORD:

Two sports that haven't gotten much recognition in past years — golf and badminton — have recently gained attention as valid competitive sports. Although not physical contact sports, they are physical in that they demand physical strength as well as strategy.

Golf has come to the public's attention because of the fact that it does require strategy and precision more than downright strength and stamina. Many people are unaware of the length of time it takes to perfect one's technique and ability as a competitor. But the game of golf makes available the chance to meet new and intriguing people as well as different styles.

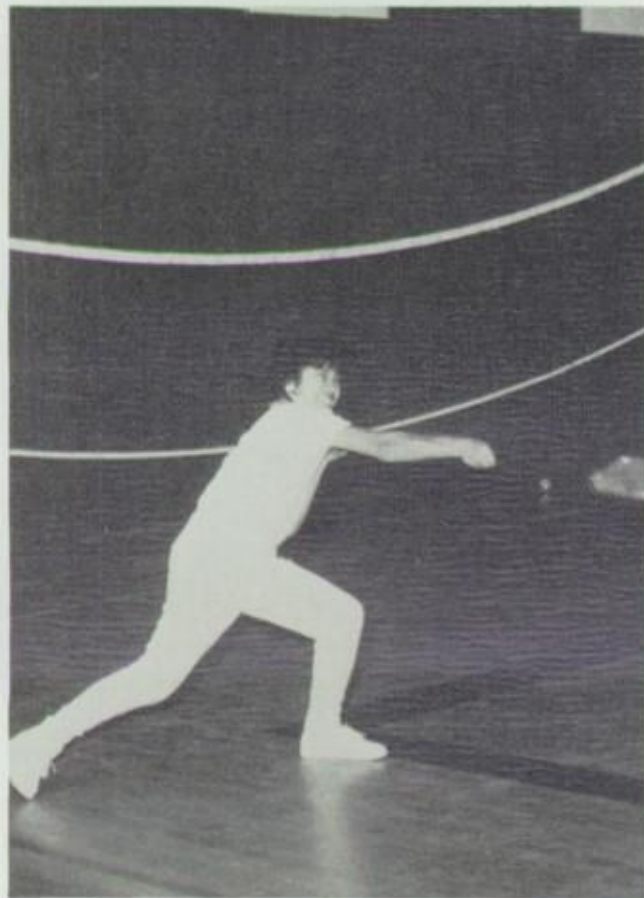

The team was made up of mostly sophomores. One sophomore that showed much promise was Peter Olds. An outstanding returning member was junior Tim Garlin. Tim should be back next year to aid the team in a terrific season.

The badminton team had a very successful turnout for their first year as a sanctioned CIF sport. Starting the season with forty members, they continued on to playoffs with thirty players.

Some of the outstanding players were Pornsavun Chanthalandith, Heidi Johnson, Thien Luong, and Mui Su. The practices were very exciting as two players volleyed the birdie back and forth to gain a spot in the next day's match.

As in every other sport hard work and dedication paid off in both golf and badminton. The work in moving these sports to the public's attention was achieved by the valiant players that gave their all this season.

Crystal clear and icy blue, the water is silently still. Perched on the starting blocks, they anxiously await the signal. BANG!!! Immediately the perfectly poised figures leap into the air and splash into the water, spraying the deck. All that is seen is arms cycling rapidly and water flying in all directions. The far wall approaches and the flip turns are completed. Now the race to the other wall begins. They see each other and know the end is coming. It's now or never! With a sudden urge of adrenalin, he darts ahead of the others, and finds himself emerging from the depths as victorious.

The boys' team was off to a great start despite their inexperience. Returning swimmers Shawn Anders, Corey Barker, Mark Bonner, Marc Henning, Paul Kemp, and Romeo Montillano provided spirit and helpful competition among the other twenty novice swimmers.

Corey Barker and Shawn Anders proved to be the most valuable members of the team against their most difficult opponents: La Jolla and University. The team's most difficult events were the 100 meter butterfly, and 200 meter I.M. The I.M. consists of 50 meters each of butterfly, backstroke, breaststroke, and freestyle. These events really require undying stamina and strength. These difficulties were met head on by the team with their definitely positive attitude towards their sport and themselves.

...AND MERMAIDS

Kickboards, paddles, poolbuoys, swim caps, goggles, and water. All the accessories are by the pool. She looks down and thinks, "Here's where it starts. This is where I begin to strain and gain speed, strength and stamina. I've got to do it." She jumps in the pool and begins her 5,000 yard workout. At the end of the workout she wearily climbs out of the pool wondering why she is putting herself through this. Two to three weeks later, after she has successfully competed in her first meet she knows why. She put herself through the training to achieve the thrill of being number one and competing. She decides it was worth it — all the exhaustion of the previous week payed off and her future training will further her abilities. She sets her goals. She strives to succeed. She enjoys the reward.

The drive and ambition so outrageously demonstrated has shown through this year in the girls' swim team; mainly motivated by the actual inter-competitive activities. Such a vivacious team attitude has proven to be a tremendous asset, for it has inspired team members to outdo each other, and in the process outdo themselves.

Of the many girls who excel in competitive swimming, the most notarized and valuable member was Myia Fujimoto. Her spirited attitude and tremendous abilities greatly inspired the girls to work harder. Diana Gleason and Rosie Putnam, also named as most valuable players greatly enhanced the team.

Returning members Dee Dee Davis, Myia Fujimoto, Diana Gleason, Mandy Jennison, Rosie Putnam, and Kammie Williams set prime examples of the efforts needed to be competitive swimmers.

The help of Raul Castillo as assistant coach tremendously helped the team with their main difficulties: 100 meter butterfly and 200 meter I.M. His experience was appreciated by all.

The attitude this team presented, one of determination and pride, egged the team always closer to their goal: CIF. One thing that helped the team was morning workouts. As in past years, the advantage of an extra hour of practice led the team to better ends than just the after school practice. It provided time for Coach Kohr to help individuals rather than the team as a whole. This advantage was surely a factor that could not be ignored; a factor that was invaluable.

SHARP SHOOTERS!

The tension and concentration begins to mount. All senses are trained to the target. Object? To hit the bullseye. The eye positions itself perfectly through the sight. When the trigger is pulled, one immediately knows the results: hit or miss.

The result this year was a hit. Returning members Michael Atkisson and Kristine Shimanek aided the team tremendously and boosted their spirits.

One might ask what is obtained from being on the rifle team? The answer is discipline, the thrills of competing and winning, and most important, how to handle the weapon safely and properly. The training is very important and will never be forgotten.

The team had difficulty with the standing position. This did not, however, dampen their attitudes against their toughest competitors: Army/Navy Academy and Carlsbad. The members of this year's team were "the second or third best in 13 years."

The sound of bouncing balls echoes through the campus, as the team trained for the season ahead. This year's team would reflect the skill that had been so preciously earned from the previous year for the returning players had gained a precious advantage — the art of strategy that was yielded through experience. This precious asset was to be one of the more potent characteristics that would serve as the backbone for victories that would lie ahead.

One of the team's most dear assets was not only gained skill, but the quality of each player as well. A prime example being Marcell Tongco. This three year varsity tennis player has proven to be outstanding in all aspects of the sport, and has been the catalyst for many team achievements. He has contributed not only his skill, but his enthusiasm to win, as well.

The upcoming year was to present many strong opportunities for the team. Most of the key players will inevitably be seniors, and many of the sophomores and juniors will bring with them a strong weight in power, because of their previous encounters in tennis tournaments. With such players to fill next years' team, there can be no limit to the endless opportunities for countless victories. As Marcell Tongco said, "We have the quality as well as the quantity in players . . . how can we go wrong?"

In the Beginning

*T*hey are unfamiliar faces, searching out the new. Attempting to conquer and striving to succeed. The young ones once more, always climbing further up that ladder of success. They will slip, they will fall, and they again will arise. Erasing the thick line of limitation, they will become the leaders within themselves, and find true meaning in the origin. Yes, hardships still lie before them, but real victory lies in subduing the obstacles. It is the future they hold for us, each of them shining promises yet to be fulfilled; promises made in the beginning.

On the Loose...

Somehow, it spread its wings almost too quickly, and its flight ended too soon. The year had taken off with a dazzling touch of class, and before our eyes, glimmered with the reflections of the thoughts and memories shared. Some entered with the excitement of realizing the first year of what was to be the traditional high school commencement, and others were to experience the responsibilities of nearing adulthood, hoping and dreaming of a long-awaited prom night, and finally, the initiation into the real world. Together guided by the goals and ambitions, and overtaking our eyes to the progress which would inevitably lie before us. Excitement was shared in the dances, and the sporting events of what molded sweet high school memories, yielding to us their fruits of bitter-sweetness.

▼ GIVING a friend a soothing squirt is what it's all about during the hot weather of October.

▼ CAUGHT toilet papering Rudy Peralta's car during class time, Joyce Abuan, Emlyn Estopare, and John Warren ...

add the finishing touches to their wet, but wonderful piece of art.

And Loving It !!

7ime has wrought the shining moments of what we were in this miniature space in time. What we have all partaken of can never again be obtainable, yet at the same token, cannot be taken away. The memories have been engraved within our souls, and the smiles and tears will be brought to mind in our old age. We are an era in itself, marked with the honorable distinction of possessing the greatest trait of all ... a touch of class.

The theme "A Touch of Class" has been chosen because of its significance to the successful school year. With the great memories that have been left, most of us won't be needing that special "touch" to bring us back together.

► PARTYING was a common word around campus, and these students prove it while doing what they do best.

▲ WHILE in Mr. Hayes' class, Greg Delgado displays his extra two arms.

◀ DURING their free time in class, Tung Ton and Tony Oshmago add fun to their somewhat ordinary day.
